Πᾶσα σοφία παρὰ Κυρίου καὶ μετ' Αὐτοῦ ἐστὶν εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα (Σειράχ, Α', 1)

Πλήρεις χαρᾶς καὶ εὐφροσύνης, ὑποδεχόμεθα καὶ προλογίζομεν τὴν ἔκδοσιν τοῦ ἐπιστημονικοῦ Περιοδικοῦ τῆς Μητροπολιτικῆς Ἀκαδημίας Θεολογικῶν καὶ Ἱστορικῶν Μελετῶν Ἁγίων Μετεώρων, τοῦ ὑπὸ τὸν τίτλο «Ἀνάλεκτα Σταγῶν καὶ Μετεώρων – Analecta Stagorum et Meteororum». Τὸ ἐν λόγῳ Περιοδικὸν σκοπεῖ εἰς τὴν μελέτην τῆς Ἱστορίας καὶ τῆς πνευματικῆς παρακαταθήκης τῆς ἀγιοτόκου πολιτείας τῶν Ἁγίων Μετεώρων καὶ τῆς παλαιφάτου ἐπισκοπῆς τῶν Σταγῶν, νῦν δὲ ἱερᾶς Μητροπόλεως Σταγῶν καὶ Μετεώρων. Εἰς τὸ ἐν λόγῳ συλλογικὸν πόνημα ἀναδεικνύεται μετὰ πολλῶν γραπτῶν πηγῶν καὶ ἀρχαιολογικῶν μαρτυριῶν, ἡ πολύχρονος ἱστορία τῆς τοπικῆς Ἐκκλησίας, ὁ πολιτισμικὸς θησαυρὸς τῆς μετεωρικῆς Θηβαΐδος, καὶ ἡ δρᾶσις τῶν μεγάλων ἐκκλησιαστικῶν προσωπικοτήτων τῆς Δ. Θεσσαλίας.

Διὰ τοῦτο εἴμεθα ἐκ τῶν προτέρων πεπεισμένοι ὅτι ἡ ἔκδοσις καὶ ἡ διάδοσις τοῦ Περιοδικοῦ Ἀνάλεκτα Σταγῶν καὶ Μετεώρων θὰ συντελέσῃ οὐχὶ μόνον εἰς τὴν γνῶσιν τῆς ἱστορίας τῆς περιοχῆς τῶν Σταγῶν ἢ τῶν μετεωρικῶν Μοναστηρίων, ἀλλὰ καὶ εἰς τὴν περαιτέρω ἀναγνώρισιν τῆς συμβολῆς τῆς τοπικῆς Ἐκκλησίας εἰς τὴν πνευματικὴν ἀνάπτυξιν τοῦ ὀρθοδόξου Ἑλληνισμοῦ ἀπὸ τὰ βυζαντινὰ ἕως τὰ νεότερα χρόνια.

Ἐκφράζομεν τὴν εὐαρέσκεϊαν καὶ εὐχαριστίαν ἡμῶν πρὸς τὰ κοπιάσαντα μέλη τῆς τριμελοῦς συντακτικῆς Ἐπιτροπῆς τοῦ Περιοδικοῦ καὶ πρὸς τὰ ἐλλόγιμα μέλη τῶν ἐπιμέρους ἐπιστημονικῶν Ἐπιτροπῶν, διὰ τὴν ἀξίειπαινον αὐτῶν σπουδὴν καὶ ἐπιθυμίαν. Ὡσαύτως, θερμὰς εὐχαριστίας καὶ εὐγνώμονας προσρήσεις ἐκφράζομεν πρὸς τοὺς συγγραφεῖς τῶν μελετῶν τοῦ πρώτου τεύχους, οἵτινες διὰ τῆς ἐνδελεχοῦς ἐντρυφήσεως αὐτῶν εἰς τὰς πηγὰς, ἀπέδωσαν μὲ ἀντικειμενικότητα καὶ ἐπιστημονικὴν ἀκρίβειαν πάντα ὅσα οὗτοι πραγματεύονται.

Ἡ χάρις τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, διὰ πρεσβειῶν τῆς Ὑπεραγίας Θεοτόκου τῆς Μετεωριτίσσης καὶ πάντων τῶν Ὁσίων τῶν ἐν τοῖς λίθοις τῶν Μετεώρων λαμπάντων, εἴη μετ' αὐτῶν καὶ πάντων ἡμῶν, Ἀμήν.

THE ARTISTIC ACTIVITY OF THEOPHANES THE CRETAN IN WESTERN THESSALY AND THE EMERGENCE OF THE “CRETAN SCHOOL” OF PAINTING IN OTTOMAN GREECE

Konstantinos M. Vapheiadēs

ABSTRACT: One of the leading Cretan artists of the sixteenth century, whose production has not been thoroughly and critically examined yet, was Theophanes Strelitzas. The following article will expand our knowledge of his prolific artistic activity under monastic patronage in West Thessaly, already known from the katholikon of the Monastery of St. Nicholas Anapausas. In the first place, unpublished icons which pertain to Theophanes's artistic idiom will be presented from ecclesiastical collections of the wider region. Based on this evidence, the article will raise questions concerning the emergence of the “Cretan School” of painting in Ottoman Greece. This discussion aims at a critical questioning of the prevailing art historical narrative on the Cretan style's dissemination in Thessaly and continental Greece in general.

I. INTRODUCTION

The style of painting defined as the “Cretan School” undoubtedly represents one of the most important chapters in the history of post-Byzantine painting¹. This is mainly because a large number of churches, especially in the monastic communities of Mount Athos and Meteora, are adorned with frescoes and icons executed by painters attributed to this maniera. Mainstream art historical narratives associate the art of Theophanes Strelitzas or Bathas (pre-1527 - †22 August 1559) with the emergence and dissemination of the “Cretan School” in Ottoman Greece.

Nonetheless, we still do not possess a complete picture of Theophanes’s work, nor has a detailed study been made of the actual extent of his contribution to the development of post-Byzantine painting in mainland Greece or, by extension, the relationship between his work and that of other sixteenth-century artists. It should be pointed out that the work of these other artists has not received the same scholarly attention as that of Theophanes. Consequently, this has created the misleading impression that Theophanes is the chief exponent of the “Cretan School”. The problem is intensified by the stereotypical views that have come to prevail in this field of research, views that hinder our understanding of the art of this period. These views present Crete as the only artistic centre in the Orthodox world that is worthy of note and the “Cretan School” as the only worthy example of late Constantinopolitan art. They also present Theophanes as a unique phenomenon that is unconnected with the artistic output of Ottoman Greece, even though it is a well-known fact that Theophanes was the scion of an artistic family from the Peloponnese and that not a single work of his has survived on Crete, despite the impressive scale of his output².

Be that as it may, it is undeniable that the work of Theophanes the Cretan represents a landmark in the development of post-Byzantine painting. On the basis of inscriptions or marginal notes, three monumental ensembles were executed by this painter: the painted decoration in the katholikon of the Monastery of St. Nicholas Anapausas at Meteora (1527) and the frescoes in the katholika of the Monastery of Great Lavra (1535)³ and the Monastery of Stavroniketa (1546) on Mount Athos⁴. Moreover, it is considered certain that Theophanes also painted the refectories of these two Athonite monasteries⁵, as well as the Chapel of St. John the Baptist and the old portal of Stavroniketa Monastery⁶. In addition to these frescoes, about sixty-five icons have been attributed to the painter, according to the catalogue compiled by Efthymios Tsigaridas⁷. It should be noted that these icons, most of which are on Mount Athos, have been attributed to Theophanes on the basis of stylistic criteria as none of them actually bears the artist's signature. Given that the extant output of other well-known and equally productive sixteenth-century "Cretan" painters numbers no more than 10-15 icons, the scale of Theophanes's output is truly impressive.

II. THE FRESCOES IN THE KATHOLIKON OF THE MONASTERY OF ST. NICHOLAS ANAPAUSAS

The Monastery of St. Nicholas Anapausas was most probably founded in the mid-fourteenth century and then completely renovated in the early sixteenth century, which is when the present katholikon was built, according to the dedicatory inscription: + ΑΝΗΓΕΡΘΗ ΕΚ ΒΑΘΡΩΝ Ο ΘΕΙΩΣ Κ(ΑΙ) ΠΑΝΣΕΠΤΩΣ ΝΑΩΣ ΤΟΥ ΕΝ ΑΓΙΗΣ ΠΑΤΡΟΣ ΕΙΜΩΝ / ΝΙΚΟΛΑΟΥ. ΠΑΡΑ ΤΟΥ ΠΑΝΙΕΡΟΤΑΤΟΥ ΜΙΤΡΟΠΩΛΙΤΟΥ ΛΑΡΙΣΗΣ ΚΗΡ ΔΙΟΝΙΣΙΟΥ Κ(ΑΙ) ΤΟΥ ΟΣΕΙΩΤΑΤ(ΟΥ) / ΕΝ ΙΕΡΟΜΟΝΑΧΕΙΣ ΚΗΡ ΝΙΚΑΝΩΡΟΣ Κ(ΑΙ) ΕΞΑΡΧΟΥ ΣΤΑΓΩΝ. Κ(ΑΙ) Τ(ΩΝ) ΕΥΡΙΣΚΟΜΕΝΩΝ ΑΔΕΛΦΩΝ ΕΙΣΤΩ/ΡΙΘΗ ΔΕ Κ(ΑΙ) ΔΙΑ ΕΞΟΔΟΥ ΤΟΥ ΕΥΤΕΛΟΥΣ [Κ]ΥΠΡΙΑΝΟΥ ΙΕΡΟΔΙΑΚΩΝΟΥ / ΕΤ(ΕΙ) ,Ζωλστ' [7036 = 1527] ΜΗΝΙ ΟΚΤΩΒΡΙΟΥ ΙΒ' ΕΝ Ι(ΔΙΚΤΙΩΝΙ) Α / Χείρ Θεοφάνη / Μ(ΟΝΑ)Χ(ΟΥ) ΤΟΥ ΕΝ ΤΗ / ΚΡΙΤΗ ΣΤΡΕΛΗ/ΤΖΑΣ [...]⁸.

According to the inscription, the founders of the katholikon of the Monastery of St. Nicholas Anapausas were Dionysios, the Metropolitan of Larissa, known as 'the Merciful' (ca. 1482 - ca. 1489, †1510)⁹, and Nikanor, Exarch of the Diocese of Stagoi (†1521). However, the cost of the painted decoration was undertaken by the hierodeacon Kyprianos, about whom we have no other information. It is very likely that the deacon who is portrayed without a halo and kneeling be-

It should be noted that St. Bessarion 'of the Saviour', the scion of a wealthy priestly family and a leading figure of his day, was transferred to the Diocese of Stagoi in 1521. Later he became Metropolitan of Larissa (1527-1540), with his seat being at Trikala. As is well-known, he was responsible for many charitable works, including, of course, the construction of the Monastery of the Saviour of the Great Gates at Dousiko (1527-1534)¹¹. Although the dedicatory inscription in the katholikon of the Monastery of St. Nicholas Anapausas does not mention the hierarch's name, it seems that St. Bessarion was behind the idea of inviting Theophanes the Cretan to execute the painted decoration at Meteora and not the hierodeacon Kyprianos¹².

The frescoes in the katholikon of the Monastery of St. Nicholas Anapausas, partially preserved and on the façade of the church, are considered to be Theophanes's first monumental work¹³, although they presuppose previous experience of fresco decoration of churches.

Despite the problems of organising the decoration in a building of such peculiar design, both the iconographic programme of the katholikon and the iconography as a whole generally follow the dictates of the Palaiologan period. The iconography of the scene of the Dormition of St. Ephraim¹⁴ - which is modelled on the icons depicting the same subject in Lefkada (mid-fifteenth cent.), at the Byzantine and Christian Museum in Athens (post-1456) and at the Iveron Monastery on Mount Athos (late fifteenth cent.)¹⁵ - as well as the iconography of individual figures, such as the Man of Sorrows - which may be considered to have been modelled on the icons in the Saroglou Collection (late fifteenth cent.), the icons in Patmos (second half of fifteenth cent.), and the icons of Nikolaos Tzafouris in Vienna (1489-1500)¹⁶ - or the figure of St. Merkourios, which recalls such icons as that of St. George the Dragon Slayer in the Zakynthos Museum (fifteenth cent.)¹⁷, do not provide much assistance to our efforts to identify Theophanes's artistic background¹⁸. This is because these late Gothic models have been skilfully adapted in the artist's style¹⁹. For example, the realistic wrinkles on Christ's forehead and the locks of his hair in Tzafouris's picture are absent in Theophanes's figure at St. Nicholas Anapausas²⁰.

From a stylistic point of view, the rendering of Christ's body in the depiction of the Vision of St. Peter of Alexandria and the formation of the folds in the garments of St. James the Persian (fig. 2) and St. Christopher (fig. 3) are also based on late Gothic models²¹. However, such features are few and far between and only of minor significance in Theophanes's work, and in no way alter the painter's Byzantine perception of the rendering of space and the human figure, which is evident above all in the drawing and the composition²².

Consequently, Theophanes's painting, in the form it takes in Mount Athos and Thessaly - in this particular case, the Monastery of St. Nicholas Anapau-sas - does not adopt many elements of the mixed artistic style employed by the Cretan painters. On the contrary, it draws its iconographical and quite a few stylistic features from late Palaiologan painting, features that would have been familiar to Theophanes from works produced in Crete before the Fall of Constantinople (1453), such as the frescoes in the Church of the Virgin Mary at Valamonero, the Church of the Presentation of the Virgin Mary at Sklaverochori, and the Church of the Archangel Michael at Episkopi in the Pediada region, assuming that Theophanes received his basic education on Crete. It is clear, however, that the painter, after having received his basic training in perhaps his father's workshop, matured as an artist in Ottoman Greece, given that no (early) work of his survives in Crete and that all of his output is connected exclusively with the monastic communities of Mount Athos and Meteora²³.

In addition, we have already noted that the decoration in the katholikon of St. Nicholas Anapausas presupposes experience in the art of fresco painting. Although the scale of the church might not have required a great degree of specialisation, it is certain that painting frescoes on its walls would have required an appropriate use of means and materials different to those required in the production of icons²⁴. It is therefore reasonable to assume that Theophanes (also) worked as a fresco painter before 1527. Where exactly, it is impossible to say with certainty, although frescoes such as those in the katholikon of the Monastery of St. Neophytos in Paphos (after 1503 - before 1544) are stylistically close to those of the katholikon of St. Nicholas Anapausas²⁵. However, the fact that Theophanes was invited to Meteora, evidently by St. Bessarion II of Larissa, implies that he was well-known from his work in mainland Greece.

This view is indirectly supported by the following finding: Theophanes seems to have collaborated with another painter whose name is not mentioned in the dedicatory inscription. The latter's work is not easy to discern since his artistic idiom is very close to that of Theophanes. Nevertheless, after a careful stylistic study it is possible to attribute some of the Christological themes in the katho- likon's nave (fig. 4) and the narthex's Old and New Testament scenes (fig. 5), as well as the Dormition of St. Ephrem (fig. 6) and of St. Nicholas, to a different hand than that of Theophanes. The plasticity and realism of the figures in these frescoes is quite distinctive, bringing forward the hypothesis that the anonymous painter was not a pupil or assistant of Theophanes but a talented artist in his own right, if not superior in certain respects.

Given that no information survives about this painter, the simplest and most reasonable thing to assume is that, like Theophanes, he was working locally during the third decade of the sixteenth century and was summoned to assist with the church's decoration.

Yet the question arises: why did Theophanes choose this particular painter to assist him? Did his patron oblige him to make this choice, or did he select him on account of the good professional reputation he enjoyed locally or because his art was completely compatible with his own? If the latter is the case, does this mean that the anonymous artist had been trained in Crete, or are we dealing with a Thessalian painter who managed to master the "Cretan" techniques by working for monasteries in mainland Greece? Also, why did Theophanes require the assistance of this artist to decorate a small church of no great height like the katholikon of St. Nicholas Anapausas? In my opinion, one of the more plausible reasons was the large number of commissions that Theophanes had undertaken during the exact same time. This is borne out by a series of icons in other Thessalian monasteries, which are examined below.

III. THE MONASTERY OF THE TRANSFIGURATION OF THE SAVIOUR (GREAT METEORON)

In the museum of the Monastery of the Great Meteoron there is on display a medium-sized icon of the Three Hierarchs St. Gregory the Theologian, St. John Chrysostom and St. Basil the Great²⁶ (fig. 7).

The Three Church Fathers, whose joint commemoration was established in the late eleventh century, are arrayed in a frontal pose against a gold ground. The figure of St. John Chrysostom occupies the centre of the composition, attired in a prelate's golden sakkos and holding a gold cross. This figure is flanked by a depiction of St. Gregory the Theologian on one side and a depiction of St.

Basil the Great on the other. The latter are attired in prelate's vestments and hold a Gospel Book in their left hand.

The composition is laid out in accordance with a Palaiologan model, which appears in icons of this time, such as the large double-sided icon from Thessaloniki at the Byzantine and Christian Museum (fourteenth century)²⁷, the icon in the Monastery of Vatopedi (second half of fourteenth century)²⁸, the icon with inventory number 194/72 at the Byzantine Museum in Kastoria (first half of fifteenth century)²⁹ and the icon from the Church of the Panaghia Chrysaliniotissa in Nicosia (first half of fifteenth century)³⁰.

This late Byzantine model was to be adopted by the "Cretan" painters. It should be noted, however, that these painters always lay emphasis on the figure of St. John Chrysostom, placing it in the middle of the group, with a bejewelled benediction cross in his hand and a sakkos adorned with multiple crosses, a familiar practice since the fourteenth century³¹. Other examples of this are the depiction of the Three Hierarchs in the icon by Nikolaos Ritzos, son of Andreas Ritzos (late fifteenth century)³² and the depiction in the icon at the Zakynthos Museum (late fifteenth century)³³, which can in fact be considered a model for the icon in the Monastery of the Great Meteoron. However, compared with the icon at the Zakynthos Museum, the icon under examination here displays a freedom in the rendering of form. Its art clearly recalls the style of Theophanes.

More specifically, the drapery is rendered with gentle transitions between light and shade. An interesting detail is the wavy hems of the sticharia - a common feature in Theophanes's work - and the shading of the omophorion on the darker side of the body. The modelling of the faces is achieved through the application of relatively small, only slightly graduated lights (commonly called sarcomata in Greek painting jargon). Linear white lights (commonly known as psimithies) have been discreetly placed on the prominent parts of the volumes. In addition, the expression in the saints' eyes is at once sullen and intense due to their large size, the bold upper outlines and the white speck in the corners of the eyes. As is his wont, Theophanes uses successive lines in order to convey the impression of hair, particularly at the edges of the beards and the hair on the head. These features occur both in the icon at the Great Meteoron (fig. 8a) and the frescoes at St. Nicholas Anapausas (fig. 8b).

The connection between the icon under examination here and Theophanes's other works is also shown by the inscriptions. One example of this is the phrase O AΓ(ΙΟΣ), where the Γ lies above the O and Α, and another is the letter-combination XP, which occurs both in the icon at the Great Meteoron and the figure of St. John Chrysostom at St. Nicholas Anapausas³⁴, albeit with the addition of an M beneath the X. Also, the Ω, with its sharp angles, the diphthong combination EI and the contraction of ΓP are letter types and abbreviations often found in Theophanes's inscriptions³⁵.

According to the above, therefore, the icon in the Great Meteoron Monastery presents characteristics which match Theophanes in terms of technique, artistic idiom and script.

We know that Theophanes worked at Meteora, most likely between 1525 and 1533. It is also worth mentioning that in October 1543 the nephew of St. Bessarion, Neophytos II (of Larissa)³⁶, as Bishop of Stagoi, stayed for a while in Karyes on Mount Athos with Patriarch Jeremiah I. While he was there, Jeremiah ratified a letter by the Synaxis which settled a dispute in favour of the Monastery of the Great Lavra. The letter was signed by a number of prelates, including Neophytos³⁷. Since during the period 1543-1544 Neophytos was staying in Karyes, where Theophanes's cell and workshop were situated, it is possible that he came into contact with the artist and perhaps commissioned a few icons. Given that Neophytos's activities, both as Bishop of Stagoi and Metropolitan of Larissa (though he resided in Trikala), are associated with the Great Meteoron, it is an attractive idea to propose that the icon of the Three Hierarchs represents a votive offering by Neophytos, possibly to the monastery's konaki in Trikala, which was dedicated to the Three Hierarchs (founded in 1388)³⁸. In this case, it should be dated between 1543 and 1552, when the Great Meteoron Monastery was being renovated.

It should be noted that in the museum and sacristy of the Great Meteoron survives a set of ten epistyle icons. These icons probably adorned the templon of the monastery's old katholikon, just before its replacement between 1544 and 1552, when the new was erected³⁹. The style of these icons matches that of Theophanes and, therefore, the style of the painter who executed the icon of the Three Patriarchs.

Indeed, if we compare, for example, the icon of the Crucifixion of Christ (fig. 9a)⁴⁰ with the icon on the same subject in the Monastery of Stavroniketa (fig. 9b), we observe that, apart from the identical iconography (except for the figure of John) and script, the two icons are also alike in terms of style and technique. Details such as the use of two colours in the garments, the way in which the blood flows from Christ's wounds, the rendering of Adam's head, the chrysography, and the double lines in the haloes bear this out. Even so, the two icons differ in other respects as well: e.g., the degree of freedom and care which is demonstrated in the rendering of form. The icon from the Monastery of Stavroniketa shows a certain roughness (and rapidity) in the elaboration of the outlines and sarcomata. In contrast, in the icon from the Great Meteoron the outlines and sarcomata display care, delicacy and realism in their execution.

So, what is happening here? Are we dealing with the same painter, one who has produced two slightly different works because of time constraints or some other reason, or two different artists with exactly the same idiom? Yet, if the latter is the case, how is that possible? For it is a well-known fact that imitation is possible only up to a certain point. It should be noted that the faces in the epistyle icons from the Great Meteoron seem identical to those of the small figures in the narthex of the katholikon of St. Nicholas Anapausas, given that the painter of the narthex, like Theophanes in the naos, employed the techniques of portable icon painting in order to execute his frescoes. For example, the figure of St. Peter the Apostle in the icon of the Ascension of Christ (fig. 10a, 10b) is identical in all respects to the corresponding figure in the scene of the Second Coming at St. Nicholas Anapausas (fig. 10c)⁴¹. In my opinion, this implies that the painter of the epistyle icons at the Great Meteoron may have worked at St. Nicholas Anapausas together with Theophanes. In other words, he could well be the artist who painted the Testament scenes in the narthex and was mentioned earlier.

The connection between the epistyle icons and the painter who collaborated with Theophanes is reinforced by the fact that the artistic idiom displayed in these icons is identical to that in the icon of the Dormition of the Virgin Mary preserved in the Monastery of Varlaam.

IV. THE MONASTERY OF ALL SAINTS (VARLAAM)

In the museum of the Monastery of All Saints at Meteora, known as the Monastery of Varlaam, there is on display an icon of the Dormition of the Virgin Mary (fig. 11), which up until 1979 formed one of the two sides of a double-sided icon with the Crucifixion of Christ on the other side (second half of fourteenth century)⁴². This icon bears neither a date nor an inscription. On the basis of the artistic idiom, Myrtali Acheimastou-Potamianou attributes it to the painter Neophytos, Theophanes's son⁴³. According to Efthymios Tsigaridas⁴⁴, however, the icon was painted by Theophanes the Cretan in 1527, on the basis of comparisons with the similar fresco in the katholikon of St. Nicholas Anapausas.

However, careful examination of the icon reveals that it was executed by the painter of the epistyle icons at the Great Meteoron, a group of icons of which E. Tsigaridas had not taken notice when he wrote his article about the icon at the Monastery of Varlaam.

If we compare the icon in the Monastery of Varlaam with the icon on the same subject in the Great Meteoron (fig. 12), we find that they are both based on exactly the same Palaiologan model, both as a whole and in terms of the detail. Of course, in the icon in the Great Meteoron there are no apostles borne on clouds or angels in Christ's mandorla. This, however, is due to the small size of the icon. It should also be noted that the stylistic idiom of the icon in the Monastery of Varlaam is exactly the same as that of the epistyle icons at the Great Meteoron. In addition, we also find that the same technical process for forming the underlayer and the gold ground has been followed in both the icon from the Monastery of Varlaam and the icons from the Great Meteoron.

Consequently, the icon at the Monastery of Varlaam should be attributed to the painter of the epistyle icons at the Great Meteoron. Yet, as I have supported, this artist was the one who collaborated with Theophanes in executing the frescoes of the katholikon of St. Nicholas Anapausas. This painter appears to have continued working at the Great Meteoron after Theophanes had left. However, it should be noted that an icon of St. John Chrysostom, kept at the Athonite Monastery of Gregoriou⁴⁵, displays exactly the same artistic qualities as the icon at the Monastery of Varlaam, judging by the similarity of the figure of St. John Chrysostom to the figure of an apostle in the top right-hand section of the icon of the Dormition. If the icon of St. John Chrysostom in the Monastery of Gregoriou was in fact painted by the same artist that painted the icon at the Monastery of Varlaam, then it appears that this artist may have worked with Theophanes in Mount Athos as well.

In the Monastery of Varlaam is the single-nave Chapel of the Three Hierarchs (1627). The chapel's carved wooden templon is adorned with four despotic icons: one of Christ Pantokrator, one of the Virgin Mary, one of St. John the Baptist and, as expected, one of the Three Hierarchs⁴⁶. The latter icon⁴⁷ is signed: ΧΕΙΡ ΙΩ(ANNOY) [Τ]ΟΥ Ι(Ε)ΡΕΩΣ [ΕΚ:] Σ[ΤΑΓΩΝ:] ('by the hand of the priest John of Stagoi'). John is the painter who executed the chapel's frescoes in 1627⁴⁸.

However, the icons of Christ and the Virgin Mary do not belong to the group painted by the priest John. They probably come from the icon-screen of the chapel's earlier architectural phase (1517/18) and were, therefore, executed by a painter in the mid-sixteenth century⁴⁹. It should be noted that the anthivola (preliminary drawings) for these two figures that the artist had at his disposal do not correspond to the size of the supporting wooden structure. This is why the figures of Christ and the Virgin Mary look as if they have been 'compressed' into a narrow space, since they have been cut off at the knees without good reason. Judging by the dimensions of the icon of Christ, it can be reasonably assumed that the anthivolon for this icon was none other than that used for the same depiction on a despotic icon at the Monastery of Gregoriou, which we will comment on later.

Jesus Christ (fig. 13) is depicted on a sumptuous throne, the backrest of which bears projections in the form of anthemia. Christ is garbed in a red chiton with gold striations and a deep blue himation. Against his breast he holds an open codex with the text which usually accompanies this iconographical type: ΔΕΥΤΕ ΠΡΟΣ / ΜΕ ΠΑΝΤΕ(Σ) / ΟΙ ΚΟΠΙΩΝ/ΤΕΣ ΚΑΙ ΠΕ/ΦΟΡΤΗΣΜΕ/ΝΟΙ ΚΑΓΩ / ΑΝΑΠΑΥΣΩ / ΥΜΑΣ. ΑΡΑ/ΤΕ ΤΟΝ ΖΥ/ΓΟΝ ΜΟΥ Ε/Φ' ΥΜΑΣ Καί / ΜΑΘΕ[ΤΕ] Α[Π'] ΕΜΟΥ (Matthew 11: 28-29: 'Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn of me'). The Lord's right hand is raised in a gesture of blessing, with the ring finger and little finger touching the thumb. The halo, which is bounded by a double line, contains a cross with the phrase ὁ ὢν (inscription: Ἰ(ΗΣΟΥ)Σ Χ(ΡΙΣΤΟ)Σ Ὁ ΠΑΝΤΟΚΡΑΤΟΡ).

46 Sabanikou, "Φορητές εικόνες του 17^{ου} αι. του 'Ιερέα Ιωάννη", 341-353.

47 It is worth noting that in this icon a visual allegory is painted below the feet of the Three Hierarchs: a pillar of fire for St. Basil, a river for St. John Chrysostom, and an open well for St. Gregory the Theologian. These symbolic images, inspired by the Service of the Three Great Hierarchs, are connected with the following inscriptions: Ο ΣΤΥΛΙΟΣ ΠΥΡΟΣ (St. Basil), Ο ΠΟΤΑΜ(ΟΣ) ΤΗΣ Σ[Ι]ΟΦ[Ι]ΙΑΣ (St. John Chrysostom), [ΤΟ Β]ΛΑΘΟΣ ΤΗΣ Θ[Ε]ΟΛΟΓΙΑΣ (St. Gregory the Theologian).

The Enthroned Christ on the templon of the chapel in the Monastery of Varlaam follows the type already established in the post-iconoclastic period, which represents an artistic testimony to the Word Incarnate⁵⁰. The iconographical correspondence between this icon and numerous other depictions of the same subject dating from Byzantine and post-Byzantine times is to be expected. It should be noted, however, that the model that the painter of this icon had in mind was similar to that used by Angelos in his icon of the Enthroned Christ Pantokrator in the Zakynthos Museum (second quarter of the fifteenth century)⁵¹, and even closer to the model used for the icon by Andreas Ritzos in the Monastery of Toplou (second half of the fifteenth century)⁵². The iconographical similarity between the latter icon and that in the Monastery of Varlaam is striking, even though in Ritzos's icon Christ's himation is rendered with decorative gold lines. Also, of interest is the iconographical and stylistic connection between the icon under examination here and the icon by the painter Jeremiah in Kastoria, who, according to Tsigaridas, was a pupil of Tzortzes⁵³. Finally, the icon of Christ in the Monastery of Varlaam also displays an exact iconographical correspondence with the icon on the same subject in the Monastery of Gregoriou (1535-1546), a work that has been convincingly attributed to Theophanes⁵⁴.

The figure of the Virgin Mary on the templon of the Chapel of the Three Hierarchs follows the enthroned Virgin of the Passion type, although it is accompanied by the metaphorical epithet Η ΠΑΝΤΩΝ ΧΑΡΑ (fig. 14). The Virgin Mary, who is wearing a cherry-red maphorion with a golden hem and three decorative stars, is seated on a backless throne. With her gaze turned towards the viewer, she holds Christ Emmanuel with both hands. However, her right hand, on which Christ rests both of his hands, is open as in the Hodegetria type. The infant Christ is portrayed in profile, with his head turned upwards and to the viewer's right, towards the half-length angel bearing the symbols of the Passion. While both of his hands, as has been mentioned, hold his mother's hand, his legs are crossed, with one of the feet revealing its sole as an allusion to the passage in Genesis 3: 15. To the right of Christ survives the epigram: Ο ΤΟ ΧΑΙΡΕ ΠΡΙΝ / ΤΗ ΠΑΝΑΓΝΩ ΜΗΝΥΣ(ΑΣ) / ΤΑ ΣΥΜΒΟΛΑ ΝΥΝ / ΤΟΥ ΠΑΘΟΥ(Σ) ΠΡΟΔΕΙΚΝΗ(ΕΙ) / Χ(ΡΙΣΤΟ)Σ ΔΕ ΘΝΗΤΗΝ / ΣΑΡΚΑ ΕΝΔΕ/ΔΥΜΕΝΟΣ / ΠΟΤΜΟΝ / ΔΕΔΙ[ΚΩΣ Δ]ΕΙ/ΛΙ/Α / ΤΑΥ/ΤΑ / ΒΛΕ/ΠΩΝ ('He who previously declared "hail!" to the All-Pure One now shows the symbols of the Passion, and Christ, clothed in mortal flesh, cowers on seeing them').

The iconographical theme of the Virgin of the Passion is known from the late Middle Byzantine period, an example being the representation in the katholikon of the Monastery of the Panaghia tou Arakos on Cyprus (1191/2), which depicts the Virgin Mary standing before a throne with full-length angels presenting the Arma Christi. During the Palaiologan period this iconographical type would enjoy only a limited distribution, with other instances of it occurring in the frescoes at the Monastery of Latomou in Thessaloniki (fourteenth century)⁵⁵ and at the church of St. Stefan at Konče (a metochion of Chilandar Monastery) (1366-1371)⁵⁶ and also, in an icon at the Sinai Monastery (c. 1400)⁵⁷. This theme, however, would undergo further development and eventually become standardised in the first half of the fifteenth century, most likely by the painter Andreas Ritzos⁵⁸. This artist was to paint at least three icons on this theme. In his signed icons at the Galleria dell'Accademia in Florence and that at the Galleria Nazionale in Parma⁵⁹, the Virgin Mary is depicted half-length with the infant Christ in her arms. Christ, holding his mother's right hand with both of his own, turns towards the two half-length angels bearing the symbols of the Passion. The depiction is accompanied by an iambic epigram in Latin.

Numerous icons of "Cretan" inspiration would adopt the fifteenth-century model. To the second half of the same century dates an icon in the Puskin Museum⁶⁰, as well as an icon at the Monastery of St. John the Theologian on Patmos, which bears the inscription Παναγία Ἀμόλυντος and the usual epigram⁶¹. From the same period dates an icon in a private collection in Athens⁶² and, finally, the celebrated icon in the Kanellopoulos Museum⁶³, in which two small angels are portrayed holding musical instruments on either side of the Virgin Mary. To the sixteenth century dates an icon from Crete in the Hermitage Museum⁶⁴. This icon associates with the type standardised by Andreas Ritzos, although the epigram is written in Greek. Finally, it should be noted that the same theme, together with the corresponding anthivolon, is repeated by Theophanes in the despotic icons of the Monastery of the Great Lavra (c. 1535) and the Monastery of Stavroniketa (c. 1546)⁶⁵.

From a technical and stylistic point of view, the two despotic icons in the Chapel of the Three Hierarchs at the Monastery of Varlaam are undoubtedly connected with the idiom of Theophanes the Cretan, as it appears in a number of his works, including the despotic icons in the Great Lavra, Pantokrator and Iveron monasteries on Mount Athos, which date to between 1535 and 1546⁶⁶.

To be more specific, in the icons at the Monastery of Varlaam we find all the characteristics of Theophanes's art, even Christ's sullen searching gaze with the raised eyebrows, the "metallic" sheen of the sarcomata on top of a transparent underpainting, the artist's characteristic gold brushstrokes that do not obliterate the underlying bodies, and his naturalistic treatment of minor elements. What is more, we also find the same type of lettering, both in the names of the holy figures and the inscriptions, as well as in the text on the codex held by Christ.

The same stylistic features appear in a partially damaged icon from the collection of the Monastery of Varlaam. The icon's central theme is a Deesis (Τρίμωρο), which is accompanied by two other scenes.

Christ is depicted frontally and in full-length. His outstretched hands make a blessing gesture. Christ is flanked by the Virgin and Saint John the Baptist, who turn to Him with their hands in supplication. In the icon's upper part is the scene of the Hetoimasia tou Thronou, with two angels bearing the Arma Christi. Under the central scene, the Three Hierarchs, St. Gregory the Theologian, St. John Chrysostom and St. Basil the Great are depicted in bust receiving Christ's blessing.

The painter's Palaiologan models (e.g., the ca. 1400 Deesis icon in the Monastery of Virgin Hodegetria in Crete)⁶⁷, is obvious, as is the eschatological meaning of the overall iconographic program. However, the presence of the Three Hierarchs, stylistically connected with those of the Great Meteoron icon, should be associated with their role during the Second Coming, as the Church Fathers who crystallized Christ's teachings.

Consequently, an attribution of the two despotic icons in the Three Hierarchs Chapel of the Monastery of Varlaam and Deesis icon to Theophanes seems entirely plausible. Of course, the absence of signatures on these icons may cast some doubt on such a hypothesis. Yet, one should bear in mind that the same applies for all Theophanes's portable icons.

V. THE MONASTERY OF THE TRANSFIGURATION (ROUSSANO)

In the Roussano Monastery at Meteora, whose katholikon is dedicated to the Transfiguration of Christ the Saviour, is a large icon of Christ Enthroned in the iconographical type of the King of Kings and Great High Priest⁶⁸.

This icon was recently studied and published by Alexandros Anagnostopoulos in two similar articles. The first was published in a volume in memory of the late Metropolitan of Stagoi and Meteora, Seraphim, in 2016⁶⁹, while the second was published in the Deltion of the Christian Archaeological Society in 2018⁷⁰. In his first study Mr. Anagnostopoulos attributes the icon to a pupil of Theophanes and dates it to between 1570 and 1575. In the second study the same researcher attributes it, this time unreservedly, to Theophanes and dates it to 1527.

The attribution of the icon in the Roussano Monastery to Theophanes the Cretan finds the present author in complete agreement. Both the stylistic data and the script do indeed clearly suggest the hand of Theophanes.

However, it is not necessary to accept the dating to 1527, the year when the mural decoration of the katholikon of St. Nicholas Anapausas was completed. This is because this assumption suggests that Theophanes's work in north-west Thessaly should be restricted to a narrow time-frame without good reason. There is no evidence that Theophanes left Stagoi in 1527, nor is it certain that he stopped working for the monasteries in that region after his arrival in Mount Athos. In our opinion, Theophanes's connection with Thessaly persisted even after 1535. It should be recalled that after Theophanes's death, his son Neophytos was to work in Stagoi and Trikala and not on Mount Athos.

VI. THE MONASTERY OF THE SAVIOUR OF THE GREAT GATES (DOUSIKO)

Two icons (cabinet doors?) in the Monastery of the Saviour (Dousiko) at Pyli near Trikala depict the full-length figures of St. Theophanes Graptos (inscription: [Ο ΑΓΙΟΣ ΘΕ]ΟΦΑΝΗΣ) Ο [ΓΡΑΠΤΟΣ]) and St. Timothy, Archbishop of Procon-

The reason for this choice is not clear. In other words, we do not know why these two saints appear in these icons, or whether their portrayal is connected with the wishes of a particular ecclesiastical figure. The lengthy inscription under the feet of St. Timothy, which might have provided us with such information, has unfortunately mostly worn away.

St. Theophanes Graptos (c. 778 – 11 October 845) is garbed in monastic attire and holds out a scroll with the well-known anathema of the Synodikon of Orthodoxy: ΕΙ/ΤΙΣ ΟΥ ΠΡΟΣΚΥ/ΝΕΙ ΤΟΝ Κ(ΥΡΙΟ)Ν ΗΜ(ΩΝ) / Ι(ΗΣΟΥ)Ν Χ(ΡΙΣΤΟ)Ν ΕΝ ΕΙΚΟ/ΝΙ ΣΑΡΚΙ ΠΕΡΙΓΡΑ/ΠΤΟΝ, ΗΤΩ Α/ΝΑΘΕΜΑ ('If anyone does not worship our Lord Jesus Christ depicted in the icons according to his humanity, let him be anathema')⁷². St. Timothy (518-565?) is dressed in a sticharion with red vertical stripes, an epitrachelion and epigonation adorned with precious stones and tassels, a polystavrion phelonion and a cross-adorned omophorion. His left forearm supports a closed Gospel Book while his right hand is held in a gesture of blessing. The facial features of the two saints are virtually identical and differ only in respect of the termination of the beard⁷³.

The figure of St. Theophanes, like that of St. Timothy of Proconnesus, occurs in Middle Byzantine painting. Two examples of this, in the case of St. Theophanes, are the depiction in the Church of St. Panteleimon at Nerezi in North Macedonia (1164), a foundation of Alexios Angelos Komnenos, grandson of the Emperor Alexios I⁷⁴, and that in the katholikon of the Monastery of the Virgin Euergetis at Studenica (1208/09)⁷⁵. The figure of St. Theophanes also occurs in Palaiologan painting, as may be seen in the katholikon of the Chora Monastery (1316-1321)⁷⁶ and in the katholikon of the Monastery of Pantokrator on Mount Athos (pre-1357 - 1387), founded by the megas stratopedarchis Alexios (†1368/9) and the megas primicerius and protosebastus John⁷⁷.

In the post-Byzantine period St. Theophanes Graptos was often depicted in monasteries, for example in the narthex of the Chapel of St. George at St. Paul's Monastery (1552-1555)⁷⁸, in the lite of the katholikon of the Monastery of Dionysiou (1547)⁷⁹ and in the old refectory of the same monastery (1553-1569). The saint also appears in the monumental ensembles painted by Theophanes the Cretan. In the katholikon of St. Nicholas Anapausas (1527) St. Theophanes is depicted in the same iconographical type, with the same colours in the garments, although in this case he raises his right hand in a gesture of blessing, while the maxim on the scroll differs from that in the icon under examination here (Οὐδὲν ἄλλο βλέπει τὸν μοναχόν...)⁸⁰. The saint is also depicted in the katholikon and refectory of the Monastery of Great Lavra (1535)⁸¹, though not in the Monastery of Stavroniketa (1546/7). Nevertheless, an unidentified figure of a saint in the refectory of the same monastery⁸² could perhaps be identified as St. Theophanes Graptos. Finally, it is worth noting that St. Theophanes is portrayed in the lite of the katholikon of the Dousiko Monastery, in the same iconographical type but with a closed scroll⁸³.

St. Theophanes and St. Timothy of Proconnesus are portrayed full-length and frontally on a green ground, which bears linear graduations to create an impression of depth. Similar linear shading occurs in St. Timothy's Gospel Book, as well as in his epigonation and epitrachelion in order to render the folds in the vestments. This device, though not unknown in the work of other sixteenth-century artists, occurs mainly in the work of Theophanes, such as in the katholikon of the Monastery of St. Nicholas Anapausas⁸⁴. Another example of Theophanes's artistic perception is the naturalistic rendering of the precious stones and the tassels on St. Timothy's epigonation and epitrachelion. The rendering of the drapey, with the austere two-tone shadows of the folds and the use of successive linear lights to graduate the light on the large surfaces are indicative of Theophanes's early style. As for the rendering of the faces, the virtually indiscernible outlines, the smooth tensionless modelling, and the utilisation of chiaroscuro, with the creation of shading in the hair, suggests the painting of Nikolaos Ritzos (fl. 1482-1503, d. before 1507), son of Andreas Ritzos⁸⁵, and, to an even greater degree, the art of Theophanes.

Finally, it is worth noting the examples of script. The type of lettering in the two icons in the Dousiko Monastery is characteristic of the painter Theophanes⁸⁶. For example, the ending ΗΣ, with the ζ forming a coiling continuation of the horizontal arm of the Η, occurs in the frescoes of St. Nicholas Anapausas⁸⁷ and the Dodecaorton icons in the Monastery of Iveron⁸⁸.

In spite of all this, the art of the two icons from the Monastery of the Saviour of the Great Gates gives the impression of being somewhat formal, compared with other icons painted by Theophanes. For example, the ruffled drapery that usually appears in his other works is absent, as well as the characteristic “metallic” sheen of the sarcomata. However, these two stylistic features also occur in ensembles that date later than St. Nicholas Anapausas. On the other hand, if we reject the attribution of these two icons to the Cretan painter, we are still confronted with the following facts: a) the painter of the icons in question worked in north-west Thessaly, like Theophanes; b) he worked during the same period as Theophanes; c) he adopted exactly the same technique, style and script. Consequently, we are dealing with a painter of the first few decades of the sixteenth century whose mature and fully developed art is in no way inferior to that of Theophanes.

In any event, the two icons from the Monastery of the Saviour of the Great Gates present an interpretative dilemma whose two contrasting propositions are in any case beneficial to our understanding of post-Byzantine art in Ottoman Greece. For if we ultimately ascribe the icons to Theophanes, this not only strengthens the relationship of patronage between the painter and the founder Bessarion but also provides evidence of the fact that Theophanes had had some kind of previous work experience in north-west Thessaly before St. Nicholas Anapausas. If, on the other hand, we reject the connection between the icons in the Dousiko Monastery and Theophanes, then this weakens the established view that the “Cretan” idiom was introduced into the regions under Ottoman rule by Theophanes alone. This is because the art of these two icons provides evidence of the activity in Thessaly of another “Cretan” painter most likely of local origin.

Once again, the question that is of such key importance in this study arises: did this painter also learn his art in Crete? Given that the importation of icons from Crete to mainland Greece was by no means unknown, and given the traditional form of learning in art apprenticeships (copying), why would the painter in question have had to migrate, and, for that matter, to a region under Ottoman rule? It is true that during the sixteenth century the need for icons and frescoes in mainland Greece increased. However, why should we accept that the artists who hastened to work in mainland Greece all came from Crete, ignoring the fact that many of them were very probably monks from the Meteora and Mount Athos? After all, was it really impossible for a talented artist to be trained and to reach great heights of artistic expression outside Crete?

The artistic output of Thessaly gives a negative answer. It indirectly suggests that the emergence and flourishing of “Cretan” painting in Ottoman Greece was probably the result of local artistic developments, within the framework of the clearly high aesthetic requirements of the prelates and abbots in the region. This, moreover, is borne out by the painting of Theophanes and his gifted colleagues, which clearly satisfied very different needs to those of the westernised society of the Regno di Candia.

Κωνσταντῖνος Μ. Βαφειάδης

Ἡ ἔρευνα ἔχει ἀπὸ καιρὸ συνδέσει τὴν τέχνη τοῦ Θεοφάνη Στρελίτζα Μπαθά μὲ τὴν ἐμφάνιση καὶ ἀνθισπ τῆς «Κρητικῆς Σχολῆς» στὴ νότια Βαλκανικὴ. Ἐντούτοις, τὸ ἔργο τοῦ Θεοφάνη δὲν εἶναι γνωστὸ στὸ σύνολό του, οὔτε μελετημένο ὡς πρὸς τὶς πραγματικὲς διαστάσεις τῆς συμβολῆς του στὴν ἐξέλιξη τῆς μεταβυζαντινῆς ζωγραφικῆς στὴν ἡπειρωτικὴ Ἑλλάδα καί, κατ' ἐπέκταση, ὡς πρὸς τὴ σχέση του μὲ τὸ ἔργο ἄλλων καλλιτεχνῶν τοῦ 16^{ου} αἰῶνος. Ἐπισημαίνεται ὅτι τὸ ἔργο τῶν τελευταίων δὲν ἔχει τύχει ἀντίστοιχης μὲ τοῦ Θεοφάνη προσοχῆς καὶ ἔρευνας. Κατὰ συνέπεια, μένει κανεὶς μὲ τὴν ἀπατηλὴ ἐντύπωση ὅτι ἡ «Κρητικὴ Σχολή» ἐκπροσωπεῖται κυρίως ἀπὸ τὸν Θεοφάνη. Τὸ πρόβλημα ἐντείνεται ἀπὸ καθιερωμένα στὴν ἔρευνα στερεότυπα, τὰ ὁποῖα δυσχεραίνουν τὴν κατανόηση τῆς τέχνης τῆς περιόδου. Τοῦτο διότι ἐμφανίζουν τὴν Κρήτη ὡς τὸ μοναδικὸ καλλιτεχνικὸ κέντρο τοῦ ὀρθόδοξου κόσμου, τὴν δὲ «Κρητικὴ Σχολή» ὡς τὴ μόνη ἄξια ἐκπρόσωπο τῆς ὑστερης τέχνης τῆς Κωνσταντινουπόλεως. Σὺν τούτοις, ἐμφανίζουν τὸν Θεοφάνη ὡς ἄπαξ, ἕνα φαινόμενο ἀσύνδετο μὲ τὴν καλλιτεχνικὴ παραγωγὴ στὴ Βαλκανικὴ τοῦ 15^{ου} καὶ πρώιμου 16^{ου} αἰῶνος, μολοντί εἶναι γνωστὸ ὅτι ὁ Θεοφάνης εἶναι γόνος καλλιτεχνικῆς οἰκογένειας τῆς Πελοποννήσου, καὶ ὅτι οὐδένα ἔργο του σώζεται στὴν Κρήτη, παρὰ τὴν ἐντυπωσιακὴ σὲ ὄγκο παραγωγὴ του.

Τρία καθολικὰ μονῶν εἶναι ἱστορημένα ἀπὸ τὸν Θεοφάνη: ὁ γραπτὸς διάκοσμος τοῦ καθολικοῦ τῆς μονῆς τοῦ Ἁγίου Νικολάου Ἀναπαυσᾶ (1527) στὰ Μετέωρα, αὐτὸς τοῦ καθολικοῦ τῆς μονῆς Μεγίστης Λαύρας (1535) καὶ τῆς μονῆς Σταυρονικήτα στὸ Ἅγιον Ὄρος (1546). Πρὸς τούτοις, θεωρεῖται βέβαιο ὅτι ὁ Θεοφάνης ἱστορεῖ τὴν τράπεζα τῶν δύο ἀνωτέρω ἀθωνικῶν μονῶν, καθὼς ἐπίσης τὸ παρεκκλήσιο τοῦ Ἁγίου Ἰωάννου τοῦ Προδρόμου καὶ τὸν παλαιὸ πύλωνα τῆς μονῆς Σταυρονικήτα. Στὸν Θεοφάνη ἀποδίδονται ἐπίσης περὶ τὶς ἐξήντα πέντε εἰκόνες. Ἐπισημαίνεται ὅτι οἱ εἰκόνες αὐτές, ἡ πλειονότητα τῶν ὁποίων εὐρίσκεται στὸ Ἅγιον Ὄρος, ἀποδίδονται μὲ τεχνοτροπικὰ κριτήρια, ἐφόσον οὐδεμία εἰκόνα φέρει τὴν ὑπογραφήν τοῦ καλλιτέχνη.

Ὁ γραπτὸς διάκοσμος τοῦ καθολικοῦ τῆς μονῆς Ἁγίου Νικολάου Ἀναπαυσᾶ συνιστᾶ μνημεῖο κλειδί γιὰ τὴν κατανόηση τῆς τέχνης τοῦ Θεοφάνη, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν ἀπαρχῶν τῆς «κρητικῆς» ζωγραφικῆς στὴν ὀθωμανικὴ Ἑλλάδα. Ἡ ζωγραφικὴ τοῦ Θεοφάνη, ὅπως αὐτὴ ἐκδηλώνεται στὸν Ἀναπαυσᾶ, δὲν υἰοθετεῖ πολλὰ ἀπὸ τὴν «μικτοῦ» ὕφους τέχνη τῶν Κρητικῶν. Ἀντιθέτως, ἀντλεῖ τὰ εἰκονογραφικὰ ἀλλὰ καὶ ἱκανὰ στιλιστικὰ στοιχεῖα ἀπὸ τὴ ζωγραφικὴ τῶν ὄψιμων παλαιολόγειων χρόνων, οἰκεία στὸν Θεοφάνη διὰ μέσου τῆς πρὸ τῆς Ἀλώσεως (1453) εἰκαστικῆς παραγωγῆς στὴ Μεγαλόνησο, ἐφόσον ὑποθέτουμε ὅτι αὐτὸς ἔλαβε τὴν βασικὴ του ἐκπαίδευση στὴν Κρήτη. Εἶναι ὅμως προφανές ὅτι ὁ καλλιτέχνης, στοιχειωδῶς καταρτισμένος στὸ ἐργαστήριό ἴσως τοῦ πατέρα του, ὠριμάζει καλλιτεχνικὰ στὴν ὀθωμανικὴ Ἑλλάδα, δεδομένου ὅτι οὐδὲν (πρῶσιμο) ἔργο του σώζεται στὸ νησί καὶ ὅτι τὸ σύνολο τῆς παραγωγῆς του συνδέεται ἀποκλειστικὰ μὲ τὶς μοναστικὲς κοινότητες τοῦ Ἁγίου Ὁρους καὶ τῶν Μετεώρων.

Σὺν τούτοις, ὁ διάκοσμος τοῦ καθολικοῦ τῆς μονῆς Ἁγίου Νικολάου Ἀναπαυσᾶ προϋποθέτει ἐμπειρία στὴν τέχνη τῆς τοιχογραφίας. Ἐπομένως, εἶναι λογικὸ νὰ ὑποστηρίξει κανεὶς ὅτι ὁ Θεοφάνης ἐργάζεται (καὶ) ὡς τοιχογράφος πρὸ τοῦ 1527. Ποὺ ἀκριβῶς, δὲν γνωρίζουμε. Ὡστόσο, ἡ πρόσκλησή του στὰ Μετέωρα, προφανῶς ἀπὸ τὸν ἅγιο Βησσαρίωνα Β΄ Λαρίσης, ὑποδηλώνει ὅτι ὁ καλλιτέχνης ἦταν γνωστὸς στὸν ἱεράρχη ἀπὸ κάποιο ἔργο του στὴν ἠπειρωτικὴ Ἑλλάδα, καὶ πάντως ὄχι ἀπὸ κάποια ἐργασία του στὴν Κρήτη.

Στὸ ἐξεταζόμενο σύνολο ὁ Θεοφάνης συνεργάζεται μὲ ἕναν ἀκόμη χαρισματικὸ ζωγράφο, τὸ εἰκαστικὸ ἰδίωμα τοῦ ὁποῖου ταυτίζεται μὲ τὸ δικό του. Εἶναι πολὺ πιθανὸ ὅτι ὁ «ἀνώνυμος» δημιουργὸς ἐργαζόταν στὴ Θεσσαλία πρὶν τὸ 1527 καὶ ὅτι ὁ Θεοφάνης ζήτησε τὴ βοήθειά του, προκειμένου νὰ ἱστορήσουν μαζὶ τὸ καθολικὸ τῆς μονῆς τοῦ Ἁγίου Νικολάου Ἀναπαυσᾶ. Στὸν ἄδηλο τοῦτο ζωγράφο ἀποδίδουμε εἰκόνες ἐπιστυλίου τῆς μονῆς τοῦ Μ. Μετεώρου καθὼς καὶ τὴν εἰκόνα τῆς Κοιμήσεως τῆς Θεοτόκου τῆς μονῆς Βαρλαάμ.

Στὴ μονὴ τοῦ Μ. Μετεώρου σώζεται εἰκόνα τῶν Τριῶν Ἱεραρχῶν, τῆς ὁποίας ἡ τέχνη εὐρίσκεται σὲ ἀπόλυτη συμφωνία μὲ τὴν τεχνικὴ, τὸ ἰδίωμα καὶ τὴ γραφὴ τοῦ Θεοφάνη. Ὑποθέτουμε δὲ ὅτι ἡ εἰκόνα τῶν Τριῶν Ἱεραρχῶν ἀποτελεῖ ἀνάθημα τοῦ Νεοφύτου Β΄ Λαρίσης πρὸς τὸ κονάκι τῆς μονῆς στὰ Τρίκαλα, τὸ ἀφιερωμένο στοὺς Τρεῖς Ἱεράρχες (ἴδρυση 1388). Στὸν Θεοφάνη ἀποδίδουμε ἐπίσης δύο δεσποτικὲς εἰκόνες τοῦ παρεκκλησίου τῶν Τριῶν Ἱεραρχῶν στὴ μονὴ Βαρλαάμ. Στὶς εἰκόνες αὐτὲς ἀπαντοῦν ὅλα τὰ γνωρίσματα τῆς τέχνης τοῦ Κρητικοῦ καλλιτέχνη, ἀπαντᾷ ἐπίσης ὁ ἴδιος τύπος γραμμάτων, τόσον στὰ ἀγιώνυμα καὶ τὶς ἐπιγραφὰς ὅσον καὶ στὸ κείμενο τοῦ κώδικα τοῦ Χριστοῦ.

Δύο ἀκόμη εἰκόνες, σωζόμενες στὸ καθολικὸ τῆς μονῆς τοῦ Σωτῆρος Μεγάλων Πυλῶν (Δουσίκου), μποροῦν νὰ ἀποδοθοῦν στὸν χρωστήρα τοῦ Θεοφάνη. Τοῦτο μαρτυρεῖ σαφῶς ἡ τεχνοτροπία καὶ ἡ τεχνικὴ. Ἀνεξάρτητα ὅμως ἀπὸ αὐτό, οἱ δύο εἰκόνες τῆς μονῆς Δουσίκου προσάγουν ἕνα ἐρμηνευτικὸ δίλημμα, τοῦ ὁποῖου οἱ δύο ἀντιθετικὲς προτάσεις ἔχουν οὕτως ἢ ἄλλως θετικὴ ἀξία γιὰ τὴν κατανόηση τῆς μεταβυζαντινῆς τέχνης στὴν ὀθωμανικὴ Ἑλλάδα. Διότι ἐὰν ἐντέλει ἀποδώσουμε τὶς εἰκόνες στὸν Θεοφάνη, τότε ἐνισχύεται ἀφενδὸς ἡ σχέση πατρωνίας ἀνάμεσα στὸν ζωγράφο καὶ τὸν κτίτορα ἅγιο Βησσαρίωνα καὶ ἀφετέρου, αἰτιολογεῖται ἡ ὑπόθεση τῆς «προϋπηρεσίας» του στὴ ΒΔ. Θεσσαλία, πρὶν τὶς τοιχογραφίες τῆς μονῆς Ἀναπαυσᾶ. Ἐὰν ἀπὸ τὴν ἄλλη πλευρὰ ἀρνηθοῦμε τὴν σχέση τῶν εἰκόνων τῆς μονῆς Δουσίου μὲ τὸν Θεοφάνη, τότε ἀποδυναμῶνεται ἡ καθιερωμένη στὴν ἔρευνα ἄποψη, περὶ εἰσαγωγῆς τοῦ «Κρητικοῦ» ἰδιώματος στὶς τουρκοκρατούμενες περιοχὲς ἀποκλειστικὰ καὶ μόνον ἀπὸ αὐτόν. Τοῦτο διότι ἡ τέχνη τῶν δύο εἰκόνων τεκμηριώνει τὴ δρᾶση στὴ Θεσσαλία ἕτερου «κρητικοῦ» ζωγράφου, μὲ γηγενή, πιθανότατα, καταγωγή.

Τίθεται ὁμως τὸ ἐρώτημα: σπούδασε καὶ αὐτὸς τὴν τέχνη του στὴν Κρήτη; Δεδομένου ὅτι ἡ εἰσαγωγή εἰκόνων ἀπὸ τὴν Κρήτη στὴν ἠπειρωτικὴ Ἑλλάδα διόλου ἄγνωστη ἦταν, γιὰ ποιὸ λόγο ἔπρεπε ὁ ζωγράφος τῶν εἰκόνων τῆς μονῆς Δουσίου νὰ μεταναστεύσει, καὶ μάλιστα σὲ περιοχὴ ὑπὸ ὀθωμανικὴ κυριαρχία; Εἶναι ἀλήθεια ὅτι, κατὰ τὸν 16^ο αἰῶνα, ἡ ἀνάγκη γιὰ εἰκόνες καὶ τοιχογραφίες διογκῶνεται στὶς ἐν λόγω περιοχὲς. Γιατί ὁμως πρέπει νὰ δεχθοῦμε ὅτι οἱ καλλιτέχνες ποὺ ἔσπευσαν γιὰ ἐργασία στὴν ἠπειρωτικὴ χώρα ἦλθαν ὅλοι ἀπὸ τὴν Κρήτη, ἀγνοῶντας μάλιστα τὸ γεγονός ὅτι πολλοὶ ἐξ αὐτῶν ἦταν, κατὰ πᾶσα πιθανότητα, μοναχοὶ μετεωριῖτες καὶ ἀγιορεῖτες; Ἐντέλει ἦταν ὄντως ἀδύνατον γιὰ ἓναν ταλαντοῦχο καλλιτέχνη νὰ ἐκπαιδευθεῖ καὶ νὰ φθάσει σὲ ὑψηλὰ μέτρα εἰκαστικῆς ἐκφράσεως ἐκτὸς Κρήτης;

Ἡ καλλιτεχνικὴ παραγωγή στὴ μεταβυζαντινὴ Θεσσαλία δίδει ἀρνητικὴ ἀπάντησι. Προτείνει δὲ ὅτι ἡ ἐμφάνισι καὶ ἡ ἀκμὴ τῆς «Κρητικῆς» ζωγραφικῆς στὴν ὀθωμανικὴ Ἑλλάδα φαίνεται εἶναι νὰ ἀποτελέσμα γηγενῶν εἰκαστικῶν ζυμώσεων, ἐντὸς τῶν ὁρίων τῶν ἀποδεδειγμένα ὑψηλῶν ἀπαιτήσεων τῶν ἱεραρχῶν καὶ ἡγουμένων τῆς ἐποχῆς. Τοῦτο, ἄλλωστε, τεκμηριώνει ἡ ζωγραφικὴ τοῦ Θεοφάνη καὶ τῶν χαρισματικῶν συναδέλφων του, ἡ ὁποία ἔκδηλα ἀνταποκρίνεται σὲ ἀνάγκες πολὺ διαφορετικὲς ἀπὸ αὐτὲς τῆς ἐκδυτικισμένης κοινωνίας τοῦ Regni di Candia.
