According to the prevailing view the first Slavic monastery on the Holy Mountain was the Russian monastery of Xylourgou, an inventory list of which, drawn up in 1142, mentions the existence of forty-nine Russian books in its depository. The second monastery which seems to have accepted Slavs was the traditionally Bulgarian monastery of Zographou, whose abbot in 1163 signed a document of the Russian monastery of Saint Panteleemon in Slavic vernacular of a Bulgarian type. The monastery of Chilandar was taken over by the Serbs thirty-five years later, in 1198, when Saint Sabas and his father Stephan Nemanja received it officially from Alexios III Angelos and from the Protos of the Holy Mountain Gerasimos.

Nevertheless, it seems that the first Athonite monastery directly connected with persons of Slavic origin was founded a century earlier. In the eleventh century the sources mention the existence of a monastery named «ἡ μονὴ τοῦ Ζελιάνου»⁴. The name Zelianos is obviously Slavic, so we have to investigate the following problems: 1) the chronological sequence of the data about the existence of the monastery; 2) the changes in its property; 3) the locality of the foundation and 4) the origin of its name.

Chronological sequence of the events

1) 1033-1034. Zelianos

An act of sale dated to 1033-1034 reveals that the Athonite Monastery of Katzari possessed a piece of land called Zelianos’ place: Χριστόδουλος μοναχός και ηγούμενος μονής τοῦ Σωτήρος τῆς ἐπιλεγομένης τοῦ Κάτζαρι... ἐπεὶ δὲ οἱ πνευματικοί ἡμῶν πατήρ κύρ 'Αντώνιος δέδωκεν τῷ μοναχῷ Ἐφραίμ τόπον ψυχικῆς αὐτοῦ ἐνεκεν σωτηρίας τὸ ἐπιλεγόμενον τοῦ Ζελιάνου⁶. The passage provides us with no evidence that the place had the status of a monastery, but its periorismos informs us that it consisted of some cells: καθώς οἱ μηλέαι καὶ τὰ κελλία ἦσαν ἐνεκεν τῆς ζωτικῆς τοῦ Ζελιάνου τοῦ Κάτζαρι... ἐπεὶ δὲ οἱ πνευματικοί ἡμῶν πατήρ κύρ 'Αντώνιος δέδωκεν τῷ μοναχῷ Ἐφραίμ τόπον ψυχικῆς αὐτοῦ ἐνεκεν σωτηρίας τὸ ἐπιλεγόμενον τοῦ Ζελιάνου⁷. The passage provides us with no evidence that the place had the status of a monastery, but its periorismos informs us that it consisted of some cells: καθώς οἱ μηλέαι καὶ τὰ κελλία ἦσαν ἐνεκεν τῆς ζωτικῆς τοῦ Ζελιάνου τοῦ Κάτζαρι... ἐπεὶ δὲ οἱ πνευματικοί ἡμῶν πατήρ κύρ 'Αντώνιος δέδωκεν τῷ μοναχῷ Ἐφραίμ τόπον ψυχικῆς αὐτοῦ ἐνεκεν σωτηρίας τὸ ἐπιλεγόμενον τοῦ Ζελιάνου...

2) 1034-1040. Zelianos

Twenty lines further down Zelianos is mentioned for a second time: τὰ δὲ κατελειθύντα τοπίτζια ἔπει δὲ οἱ πνευματικοί ἡμῶν πατήρ κύρ 'Αντώνιος δέδωκεν τῷ μοναχῷ Ἐφραίμ τόπον ψυχικῆς αὐτοῦ ἐνεκεν σωτηρίας τὸ ἐπιλεγόμενον τοῦ Ζελιάνου⁸. The passage provides us with no evidence that the place had the status of a monastery, but its periorismos informs us that it consisted of some cells: καθώς οἱ μηλέαι καὶ τὰ κελλία ἦσαν ἐνεκεν τῆς ζωτικῆς τοῦ Ζελιάνου τοῦ Κάτζαρι... ἐπεὶ δὲ οἱ πνευματικοί ἡμῶν πατήρ κύρ 'Αντώνιος δέδωκεν τῷ μοναχῷ Ἐφραίμ τόπον ψυχικῆς αὐτοῦ ἐνεκεν σωτηρίας τὸ ἐπιλεγόμενον τοῦ Ζελιάνου⁹. The passage provides us with no evidence that the place had the status of a monastery, but its periorismos informs us that it consisted of some cells: καθώς οἱ μηλέαι καὶ τὰ κελλία ἦσαν ἐνεκεν τῆς ζωτικῆς τοῦ Ζελιάνου τοῦ Κάτζαρι... ἐπεὶ δὲ οἱ πνευματικοί ἡμῶν πατήρ κύρ 'Αντώνιος δέδωκεν τῷ μοναχῷ Ἐφραίμ τόπον ψυχικῆς αὐτοῦ ἐνεκεν σωτηρίας τὸ ἐπιλεγόμενον τοῦ Ζελιάνου...
Zelianos was the name of a person who was implicated and participated in the contract described in the document. It remains uncertain whether Zelianos lived alone, or was accompanied by some disciples, but it should be stressed that if Zelianos really had any, this had to be declared, as it is declared about the Abbot of Katzari Christodoulos: καί ἐδὲ καὶ ὁμοίως λέγας περί τοῦ τοιούτου τόπου ὁ Ζελιάνος, ἰναι ἴσημαι καὶ διεκδικώ χαρώ ὁ μοναχός Χριστοδούλος καὶ οἱ κατ' ἐμὲ μαθηταί καὶ διάδοχοι8. So, the text of the document does not clarify if Zelianos was an abbot of a monastery, or a solitary hermit, and the only objection to this remark may be based on the plural of the word «cells» which presupposes collective settlement. Nonetheless, it is obvious that at the time of the contract Zelianos was not living on the land Anthony had assigned to Ephraim and consequently this land was not his only possession. This consideration is confirmed by the periorismos of the parcel which refers neither to a church, nor to a chapel. The conclusions one may draw from these data are two: 1) the place Zelianos lost in favour of the monk Ephraim was not his main residence, but a hermitage with adjacent farming terrain. 2) Zelianos was probably the legal representative, i.e. the abbot of a group of anchorites, because his property in the region consisted of at least two pieces of land and seems to have been larger than was usual for solitary hermits9.

Therefore, notwithstanding the lack of direct evidence, we may assume that in 1033-1034 a monastery directed by a Slav named Zelianos was already functioning.

2) 1089. Zelianos’ monastery

In a document of 1089 the name of Zelianos appears clearly as a name of a monastery: διώρων δεξιώτα τά δύο καιρα τοῦ Κάτζαρη ἦτοι τῆς μονῆς τοῦ

8. Ibid., No 2, l. 41-43.
Zeλιάνου. The text indicates that at this time the monastery of Zelianos was perceived as identical with the monastery of Katzari\textsuperscript{11} and that the term monastery was not in frequent use, since it is to be found only once, while in another three instances it is absent: 1) είς το άκρον του αύτου ποταμού και του κατερχομένου από του Ζελιάνου\textsuperscript{12}, 2) το ήμικομεν του Ζελιάνου\textsuperscript{13}, 3) κάτωθεν του μύλωνος του Ζελιάνου.\textsuperscript{14} It seems that in 1089 the monastic institution founded by Zelianos at the beginning of the century was no longer independent and that the conventional term «monastery» was only a reminiscence of its former status. Therefore, the only conclusion one may draw from this data is that by the middle of the eleventh century the anchorite group of Zelianos was probably described as a monastery.

3) 1363. Zelianos’ place

Denise Papachryssanthou, editor of the Xenophon archive, suggests that it was the Russian monastery which inherited the territory once possessed by Zelianos\textsuperscript{15}. Nevertheless, the document of 1089 makes it clear that the monastery of Saint Panteleimon was not a direct heir to Zelianos’ domain, since in the late 11th century what was left of the monastery of Zelianos already belonged to Katzari\textsuperscript{16}. This monastery remained autonomous till 1363, when the Serbian Protos Dorotheos granted it to the Russian monastery of Saint Panteleimon. In 1363 the name of Zelianos appears again in an interpolated copy of an act of Dorotheos, concerning the donation of the monastery of Katzari to the Russians: είς τον φύακα φέοντα από του Ζελιάνου και Μακρυγένου\textsuperscript{17}. In this instance the name of Zelianos is simply a place-name in the vicinity of Katzari.

4) 1612. The Zelianos Monastery in a Slavic document

The monastery of Zelianos is mentioned again in 1612 in an unpublished Serbian act of the Xenophontos Monastery: οἱ ΒΕΛΙΚΟΙ ΒΒΕΚΟΙ ΣΩ ΟΒΙΤΕΛΛΥ ΖΕΛΙΑΝΟΒΥ ΣΙ ΡΕΧΥ ΣΩ ΚΑΙΛΑ, Η ΠΟΧΙΝΣΕΤ ΠΡΒΑ ΒΩΓΛΑ ΙΣ ΠΟΔ ΕΥΔΕΝΙΝΣΕ ΖΕΛΙΑΝΟΒΥ Η ΒΧΟΔΙΝΥ ΣΩ ΒΡΔΟ... 18. The term is again «the monastery of Zelianos» - ΟΒΙΤΕΛΛΥ ΖΕΛΙΑΝΟΒΥ, but this is not surprising, since the document is a compilation of older Greek acts. It summarises the sites where boundary marks (ΒΟΥΛΗ, i.e. βοηλλαί) of the Xenophontos monastery were placed and the passage ΠΟΧΙΝΣΕΤ ΠΡΒΑ ΒΩΓΛΑ ΙΣ ΠΟΔ ΕΥΔΕΝΙΝΣΕ ΖΕΛΙΑΝΟΒΥ Η ΒΧΟΔΙΝΥ ΣΩ ΒΡΔΟ corresponds directly to the act of 1089: τοῦ Κάτζαρη ήτοι τῆς μονῆς τοῦ Ζελίανοου 19. The name of the monastery is transliterated exactly as it was in the Greek original - ΖΕΛΙΑΝΟΒΥ (Zelanovy) and this fact indicates that the Serbian scribe was unaware of the Slavic origin of the name. Hence it appears that the place-name was already quite obsolete. The only objection to these conclusions can be based on the statement of the text that the first boundary mark of Xenophontos was set in the neighbourhood of Zelianos’ watermill: Η ΠΟΧΙΝΣΕΤ ΠΡΒΑ ΒΩΓΛΑ ΙΣ ΠΟΔ ΕΥΔΕΝΙΝΣΕ ΖΕΛΙΑΝΟΒΥ Η ΒΧΟΔΙΝΥ ΣΩ ΒΡΔΟ. The passage corresponds to the act of 1089 (είς το άκρον τῆς ράχεως κάτωθεν τοῦ μύλωνος τοῦ Ζελίανοου 20), but not so completely as in the first case. The re-arrangement of the text makes it clear that the compiler knew the exact site of the mill, so it is probable that the name of Zelianos was not forgotten until the beginning of the seventeenth century. Nevertheless, it is certain that the Serbian document reproduces the name mechanically and consequently contains no data about any further development of Zelianos’ foundation.

Therefore, the only conclusion one may draw from points 3 and 4 is that first hand evidence of the existence of Zelianos’ monastery disappears before the year 1100.

Changes in the property

We have no information about Zelianos’ early domain, since the only piece of land described by the document of 1033-1034 is the one Zelianos lost in favour of the monk Ephraim. It was situated on a hill and its boundaries coincided with the streams forming the natural borders of the hill to the east and to the west: καὶ ἐστιν ὁ περιορισμός αὐτοῦ ὅταν καὶ τὰ κελλία ἱστανται πρὸς μὲν τὸ δυτικὸν μέρος ρυάκιν χρημίζων δυοκλήνοι καὶ πρὸς τὸ ἄναπτολοχὸν μέρος ἕπερων ρυακίζων, τὸ δὲ διαμέσου ραχόννα καθὼς ἀνύνχεται μέρος τοῦ ράχονος ἀναμεταξύ τῶν δύο ρυακίτζων, ἣν ἔχει αὐτὸ καθὼς καὶ τὸ δυκαίωμα αὐτοῦ περιέχει. The only valuable thing on this terrain were some apple trees and cells in its western part and the lack of other cultivation confirms the description of the place as a hermitage (τόπον ψυχικής αὐτοῦ ένεκεν σωτηρίας). No neighbours are mentioned, so the exact locality of the land remains unknown.

It seems that at this time Zelianos had some connections with the monastery of Katzari, because the Abbot of Katzari Christodoulos stresses that his spiritual father, Anthony, had assigned to the monk Ephraim a piece of land which belonged to Zelianos. In 1089 there was a monastery of Saint Ephraim in the vicinity of the monasteries of Katzari and Zelianos, so a conjecture can be made that it was founded on the land formerly owned by Zelianos. Forty years earlier, in 991 and in 996, Anthony appears as Katzari’s Abbot in two documents of the Great Lavra and it is probable that in 1033-1034 he was still alive. The way in which Christodoulos acts, demonstrates that Zelianos was dependent on the decisions of Anthony and one may suggest that Zelianos was Anthony’s disciple. Nevertheless, there is an obvious differentiation between the part of Zelianos (εἰς τὸ μέρος τοῦ Ζελιάνου) and the part of Christodoulos (κάτω ὁ μοναχὸς Χριστόδουλος καὶ οἱ κατ’ ἐμὲ μαθηταί καὶ διάδοχοι\textsuperscript{27}), so the interpretation we propose is that both Zelianos and Christodoulos were Anthony’s disciples, but it was Christodoulos who was elected to be Katzari’s Abbot, whereas Zelianos probably seceded from the monastery, retaining the usufruct of some lands which belonged to it. Such an explanation is supported by the opinion of the editors of the document, P.

22. Cf. note 5.

Lemerle and G. Dagron, who believe that Anthony’s conscience was not clear with regard to Zelianos’ land\textsuperscript{28}. As they point out, the phrases τὰ γὰρ δοξάντα τῶν πατέρων οἱ θεία λόγια διασελέφθηκαν οἱ παιδεῖς ἀντέχειν οὐ δύναται\textsuperscript{29} and τὰ δὲ καταλείφθηκαν τοπίτζια ἢ πρὸς ἡμᾶς τῆς Κάτταρτος, κατέlυπον κἀγὼ ὃς Χριστόδουλος ἔλεγε τὸ μέρος τοῦ Ζελιάνου διὰ τὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐντολὴν\textsuperscript{30} indicate that Zelianos disagreed with the abuse of his rights. It seems that Christodoulos and Anthony feared that his protest against the donation of his land might damage the monk Ephraim and the contract they were trying to sign with the Abbot of Saint Tryphon, so they decided to recompense him with a piece of abandoned land possessed by the monastery of Katzari. This land is described as τοπίτζια; unfortunately we dispose no further information about it. Though the relations between Anthony and Zelianos cannot be clarified in detail because of the lack of precise data, we can assume that it was Zelianos’ occupation of Katzari’s land which gave rise to the latent conflict described in the document.

The act of 1089 concerns a terrain the Abbot of Katzari had bestowed up on the monastery of Xenophontos: διέρχεται ως πρὸς δύσιν κρατών τὸ αὐτὸ ρυάκιον ἀνωθεν τῶν Ἁγίων Ἀγίων καταντά εἰς τὸν ποταμόν κρατῶν tὸν αὐτὸν ποταμόν κατέχεται εἰς τὴν μίξιν τοῦ αὐτοῦ ποταμοῦ καὶ τοῦ κατερχομένου ἥπερ τοῦ Ζελιάνου ἀντικρύ τοῦ μύλους τοῦ Διονυσίου, στρέφεται πρὸς ἀντικρότατον κρατῶν τὸ ρυάκιον τοῦ Ζελιάνου ἀνέχεται οὖν δεξία τὸ ξυλοκοπεῖον τῆς μονῆς τοῦ Ἑράκλειττος καὶ ἀποδίδει τὸ διαμεταχαίρεσιν τοῦ μύλους τοῦ Ζελιάνου, ἔνθα καὶ ἡράκλειττος\textsuperscript{31}. This time the name of Zelianos is connected with a watermill, a river and a stream in the vicinity of the Barnabitze's monastery. It seems that the river and the stream formed the south and the west boundary of Zelianos' land.

The basic conclusion one may draw from these data is that in the second half of the eleventh century the monastery of Zelianos was probably a self-sufficient economic unit.

The document of 1363 informs us that the place of Zelianos lay to the north of Katzari: Εξέρχεται τὸ μονοπάτιν απὸ τοῦ Κάτζαρη και κατέρχεται τὸ μονοπάτιν μικρὸν κάτωθεν, στρέφεται δεξιὰ πρὸς βόρειον μέρος κατόρθωσε ὅμοιος ἐλευθερίας κάτω τὸν Ζελιάνου καὶ Μακρυγενους 32. This fact makes it clear that in the middle of the 14th century the Athonites were still aware that the place-names Katzari and Zelianou were not completely identical.

Locality of the foundation

As already pointed out, the monastery of Zelianos was located in the vicinity of Katzari. The sources contain no direct indications about the place where the two foundations were built, but the later Russian descriptions of Saint Panteleemon monastery point out that in 1766 the land of Katzari was used for the establishment of the Xenophontos skete 33.

G. Smyrnakes identifies the monastery of Katzari with some ruins he saw near the stream of Chrysorrarares, not far from the monastery of Pantokrator 34, but the data we have already commented on do not agree with this conjecture. More acceptable seems to be the information of Papachryssanthou, who declares that the modern place-name Katzari is to be found 1.5 km to the north-east of the Old Rossikon Monastery 35. These references make clear that the monasteries of Katzari and Zelianos were situated on the western slope of the peninsula, between the Old Rossikon and Xenophonos. The only study of Mount Athos' topography is that of Papazotos and this locates the monastery of Katzari in the rear part of an «ancient vineyard» of the Russian monastery\textsuperscript{36}. Papazotos’ map offers no details, but elucidates the fact that the place-names Katzari and Barnabitze are to be found on the two banks of the stream which flows from Makrygenes towards the new monastery of Saint Panteleemon. The passage κατόφορα δρόθως εἷς τόν ἴσωνα ἴεντα ἀπὸ τοῦ Ζελιάνου καὶ Μακρυγένου\textsuperscript{37} indicates that Zelianos’ foundation was situated on the same stream, so one may suggest that it lay higher than the monastery of Katzari and not far from the modern road connecting Karyes with Xenophontos and Vatopedi, where even today the visitor may see the cross of Makrygenes.

\textit{Origin of the name}

As it was often the practice in Athos’ early settlements, the Zelianos’ monastery was named after its founder, who lived during the first half of the 11th century.

There is no direct evidence of the language spoken by Zelianos and his congregation, but the name is undoubtedly of Slavic origin. The common genitive form Ζελιάνου derives from the Slavic genitive Желдановъ (Željanov), or Желидновъ (Zelianov) with the nominative form Желянъ (Željan). This nominative is attested as a Serbian place-name in a chrysobull Stephan Uroš I issued for Chilandar between 1254 and 1264: ог чрьшн гора поло земле и сь мегали како к штъ прађе было. Хемла на морь сояд Желиднь. Село Трънова и сь мегали, како к штъ прађе было.\textsuperscript{38}

The name Željan seems to derive from the Slavic root жêл-(zheî), apparent in the word жêлать (zheîti) and meaning, according to Franz von

Miklosich, ἔπιθυμεῖν, θέλειν or πενθεῖν. It can be found even today in rural districts of Bulgaria and Serbia. If the etymology proposed is right, the name Željan corresponds to the Greek name Πόθος or Ποθητός.

The documents make it clear that Zelianos was not an eminent person, so he may have originated from the Chalkidiki peninsula or even from Ierissos, where the presence of Bulgarian Slavs is attested by some early documents of the Monasteries of Iviron (982) and the Lavra (989). Three centuries later, in 1341, a praktikon describing the possessions of Iviron in the village Radolibos on the Strymon mentions the paroikos Μιχαήλ ο υιός του Ζελιάνου. The majority of the paroikoi registered in the document are Slavs.

so we may conclude that at this time the name Желганъ was in common use among the Bulgarian Slavs in the vicinity of the Chalkidiki peninsula and that its transliteration in Greek as Ζελιάνος was a current one. The monastery of Zelianos can be therefore described as a Bulgarian foundation.

The essential difference between the monastery of Zelianou and the later Slavic institutions on Athos is that the former began its existence by taking the name of its founder, a Slav, who could well have been a Byzantine subject. It was a Slavic monastic institution from its inception, while all the other monasteries which gradually took on a Slavic character were originally established as Greek monastic institutions. The former was a minor habitation named after its founder, while the others were major habitations, which at a certain moment were taken over by the Slavs. This is evidence, therefore, of the fact that the Slavic population of the Balkan peninsula participated, though on a limited scale, in the life of the monastic community on Athos in the early 11th century. Nevertheless, we must stress that the Athonites never paid any attention to Zelianos' origin and always perceived him not as a foreigner, but as an integral part of their society.
