ON THE EPISTOLOGY OF MICHAEL GLYKAS

If Michael Glykas is well-known today, it is undoubtedly thanks primarily to the Bίβλος Χρονική, his 12th-century chronicle of events from the creation of the world to the death of Alexios I Komnenos (1118)¹. Though the historical value of this work is somewhat undermined by the fact that all its main sources are basically known to us, the variety of the information it contains and the author's extensive commentaries on the creation of the world and various events of Holy Writ have preserved a special place for the Bίβλος Χρονικὴ in the framework of Middle Byzantine historiography.

Many questions concerning the identity and activity of Michael Glykas are still open to debate today. According to the epigram in the codex of the Klimadon Monastery that preserves his chronography², Glykas came from the island of Corfu³ and was at the height of his career during the reign of the emperor Manuel I Komnenos (1143-1180), whom he served as an imperial secretary. In addition, according to a bibliographical note in the codex Marcianus gr. 402, he lived until the fall of Constantinople to the Crusaders in 1204⁴. In the year 1159 he was sentenced to prison, and during his imprisonment in the Noumera of Constantinople he addressed at least two vernacular poems to Manuel I, begging for his release⁵, as well as a collection of twenty proverbs⁶. The reasons for Glykas' incarceration are not known, as it is not clear yet whether his imprisonment and the following partial blinding were the result of his participation in Theodore Stypeiotes' conspiracy against Manuel I Komnenos in the winter of 1158/1159, as O. Kresten proposed in 1978⁷, or should be connected with Glykas' severe criticism, in his Letter 40, of the emperor Manuel's passion for astrology, as was initially suggested by F. Chalandon⁸ and later accepted by H.-G. Beck and H. Hunger⁹. In any case, Glykas remained in prison until, probably, the year 1164, as it appears from his second poem to the emperor, pleading for his release, and it is presumed that not long afterwards he regained his freedom and assumed the monk's habit. Despite being sentenced to blinding it appears that he was in a position to continue his work, and according to the prevailing view his chronicle and most – if not all – of his letters were composed after his release¹⁰.

Compared to the Bίβλος Χρονική, the two vernacular poems addressed to Manuel I and to a certain degree the collection of proverbs, Michael Glykas' epistology is today the least studied part of his work. P. Magdalino referred briefly to Glykas' letters in his monograph on the emperor Manuel I Komnenos, as did more recently A. Karpozilos, while acknowledging the need for an extended special study¹¹.

More specifically, Glykas' epistolographic corpus consists of ninety-five texts of theological content, which cover a total of 967 pages in the old and un procurable edition by Sophronios Eustratiadis¹², a generally satisfactory edition with a rudimentary apparatus criticus and apparatus fontium, but no obvious evidence of manuscript misreading. The Byzantine text is accompanied by an extensive introduction, which is a significant contribution to the study of Glykas' life and work, as it marks the first proposed identification of Michael Glykas with Michael Sikidites, the monk who in the late 12th century sparked the theological controversy on the corruptibility of the Eucharist¹³. Furthermore, Eustratiadis' edition also included Glykas' two poems, his collection of proverbs and two texts directly relevant to Glykas' life and work: a πιττάκιον of Manuel I, where the emperor defends his interest in astrology (Letter 40 is Glykas' answer to that letter)¹⁴, and the twenty-seventh chapter of Nicetas Choniates' Θησαυρὸς τῆς Ὁρθοδοξίας, regarding the controversy that raged at the end of the 12th century over the corruptibility of the Eucharist¹⁵.

The indisputably precious work of Eustratiadis suffers, however, from other problems in addition to the expected deficiencies of its time. I shall mention only the most obvious of these:

(I) Of the fifty-five manuscripts mentioned by the editor that preserve all or part of Glykas' epistolography under either his name or that of John Zonaras¹⁶, Eustratiadis used only the seven codices (Paris. gr. 228 and Vind. theol. gr. 155, 13th c.; Marc. gr. 111, 14th c.; Vind. hist. gr. 28, Vind. theol. gr. 47, Vind. theol. gr. 67 and Vind. theol. gr. 83, 16th c.) that were accessible to him (five of them are held in the Austrian National Library in Vienna, where Eustratiadis served as deacon of the Orthodox Church), which in his estimation represent three successive revisions of the text¹⁷. However, among the forty-eight manuscripts that for practical reasons the editor was not able to take into consideration¹⁸, there are two basic codices of the manuscript tradition, the Athos Pantel. gr. 212 (13th c.) and the Mosq. 230 (= Mosq. Hist. Mus. Syn. gr. 219/230 Vlad., 1603), which preserve almost the whole of Glykas' epistolography¹⁹. And now a third manuscript, unknown to Eustratiadis at the beginning of the 20th century, the codex Guelf. 73 Gud.

17. In his review on Eustratiadis' edition Kurtz rejects the editor's assumption that Glykas himself was aware of the various editions of his letters [see E. KURTZ, review on Μιχαὴλ τοῦ Γλυκᾶ, Εἰς τὰς ἀπορίας τῆς θείας Γραφῆς Κεφάλαια, ed. S. EUSTRATIADIS, v. I, Athens 1906, in: BZ 17 (1908) 168].

gr. (15th c.), which preserves ninety-one of Glykas' letters, should be included among the best manuscripts of his work²⁰. Today, therefore, it is questionable whether Eustratiadis' edition was based on the best manuscripts and thus many important issues as to the titles and the names of the addressees are still open to debate.

(II) The editor also admits that he was not always able to trace Glykas' sources, for many of them were still unedited in his time²¹. But even in the case of identified citations, quotation marks often open inside the text without ever closing and vice versa, which leaves the reader uncertain as to the exact beginning and end of a certain passage and, more importantly, whether Glykas copied the source texts faithfully or rephrased them from memory, a highly interesting distinction as regards his scholarship and method of composition.

(III) In the titles of Letters 86, 87 and 88²² the recipient's name is replaced by the phrase Tῷ αὐτῷ, which is unsatisfactory since no addressee is specified in either of the two preceding letters (Letters 85 and 84), and while Letter 83 is indeed explicitly addressed to the monk Alypios²³, to me that is insufficient evidence for accepting Eustratiadis' assumption that Alypios was also the intended recipient of Letters 86, 87 and 88²⁴. Given, moreover, that these three letters are preserved in the same order in the main codices of Eustratiadis' edition, a parallel study of the whole manuscript tradition is essential.

To sum up, despite the fact that Eustratiadis' edition seems to reproduce Glykas' text adequately and therefore permits a fairly safe study of his epistolographic work, it cannot be considered as the final edition. On the contrary, the need for a new modern edition of the text that takes into account the entire rich manuscript tradition, especially in reference to issues connected with the arrangement of the letters in the corpus, their superscriptions and the names of the recipients, is imperative.

By far the largest group of these ninety-five letters correspond to the title of Eustratiadis' edition (Μιχαὴλ τοῦ Γλυκᾶ, Εἰς τὰς ἀπορίας τῆς θείας Γραφῆς Κεφάλαια), for they aim at providing persuasive answers to various theological issues that derive from the reading of the Old and New Testaments²⁵ or arise in the daily lives of monks and ordinary faithful Christians²⁶. Thus, without ignoring the major controversial theological issues of the day (azymes²⁷, filioque²⁸, ὁ πατήρ μου μείζων μου ἐστι²⁹, corruptibility of the Eucharist³⁰), Michael Glykas' epistolography mainly concerns the logical questions of ordinary Christians about life, death, sin and salvation after death, that arise as a result of certain obscurities and contradictions in the context of formal Church teaching. Glykas endeavours to solve these problems with the help of his deep knowledge of the ecclesiastical sources, interpreting them with a strong dose of common sense and good will. This is the main feature common to all his letters, which also display several similar principles of composition: for example, the subject of each letter is defined at the outset, often in a cautiously written preface, after which Glykas begins to develop his argument, quoting extensively, and chiefly, from Christian literature³¹ and sometimes from various secular Byzantine sources as well³².

30. Letter 59 Ἐπι καὶ τοῦτο ἡπάρχονται εἴτε φθαρτή ἐστιν ἡ ἀγία τοῦ Χριστοῦ μετάληψις εἴτε καὶ ἄφθαρτος (Κεφάλαια, v. II, 133-135); Letter 84 Τῷ τιμιωτάτῳ μοναχῷ κυρῷ Ἰωαννικῷ τῷ Γραμματικῷ. Ἀπολογητικὸν ἐκ μέρους πρὸς τὸν μοναχὸν ἐκεῖνον τὸν ἀποκαλέσαντα κακοδόξους ἡμᾶς, ἐπειδὴ λέγομεν ὅτι ὁ τῆς προθέσεως ἄρτος τοιοῦτος ἐστι κατὰ φύσιν, ὅποια ἦν ἡ ἀγία τοῦ Χριστοῦ σὰρξ ἡ ἐπὶ τοῦ μυστικοῦ δείπνου τοῖς μαθηταῖς εἰς βρῶσιν δοθεῖσα (Κεφάλαια, v. II, 348-379).

31. See for example Letter 8: Ἐφ' οἷς ἡπάρχονται, ὀσιώτατε ἀνερ, πῶς ἐκ νεκρῶν ἀναστῆσονται τὰ τῶν ἀνθρώπων, λέγων, σώματα, καὶ ποιώ τῷ σχῆματι, καὶ εἰ ἔστι διαφορὰ ἀρρενός τε καὶ θῆλος, ἀμηχανία καὶ ἡμᾶς οὐ μικρὰ πολὺν ἥδη κατέχει καὶ φύσιν ἐφ' ὃ καὶ πρὸς ἴσχυός οὐκ ἔχομεν εὐχερῶς ἐπὶ τούτοις ἀπόκρισιν δοῦναί σοι... Ἀλλ' ἐπειδὴ καταναγκάζεις τέως ἡμᾶς ἐπὶ μέσου προθεῖναί σοι τὰ τῶν διαληφθέντων ἀγίων ὅρτά, ὡς ἐντεῦθεν ἐπιγνῶναί σε τίς τε ἡ δύναμις αὐτῶν καὶ ὅπως ἐκλαμβάνειν αὐτὰ χοὴ καὶ τί τὸ συναγόμενον ἐκεῖθεν ἡμῖν, ἵδον καταπειθεῖς ἔχεις πρὸς τοῦτο, καὶ μὴ βούλομένους, ἡμᾶς. Καὶ εἰ βούλῃ, πρὸ τῶν ἄλλων αὐτῷ τῷ θειοτάτῳ πρόσχες Ἀθανασίῳ· ἐν γὰρ τοῖς πρὸς Ἀντίοχον Κεφαλαίοις οὕτω λέγων εὑρηται. «ῶσπερ ἔνα ἀνθρωπὸν ἐποίησεν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς ὁ Θεός, οὕτως ἐν τῇ παλιγγενεσίᾳ πάντες εἰς ἀνθρωπὸς ἀνιστάμεθα». τουτέστι πᾶσα ἀνθρώπου εἰκὼν ὅμοια ἐσται τότε τῆς τοῦ Ἀδάμ εἰκόνος καὶ πλάσεως καὶ μεγέθους καὶ σχήματος. Διὸ οὐκ ἐστιν ἐν τῇ ἀναστάσει ἄρσεν καὶ θῆλυ, οὐ μικρὸς καὶ μέγας, οὐ μέλας καὶ ἔσθιτος, οὐ διάφορα πρόσωπα τε καὶ σχήματα». Σαφῶς μὲν οὖν ἐνταῦθα ὁ θεῖος οὗτος ἔδειξεν ἀνήρ ... (Κεφάλαια, v. I, 89,5-12).

32. For example in his Letter 56 (Τῷ τιμιωτάτῳ μοναχῷ κυρῷ Νεκταρίῳ. Περὶ τοῦ Ἰουδαίου εἴτε τῇ ἀγχόνῃ ἐναπέψυξε, κατὰ τὴν εὐαγγελικὴν ἴστορίαν, εἴτε μετὰ ταῦτα ἐπιζήσας, ὡς φασὶ τινες, ὑδέρω περιέπεσε καὶ οὕτω τὸ τοῦ βίου τέλος ἐδέξατο) Glykas cites the chronicle of George Kedrinos as well (Historiarum Compendium, ed. I. BEKKER, Berlin 1838-1839, 345,14-20): Πρὸς δέ γε τοῖς εἰρημένοις, ὀσιώτατε ἀνερ, καὶ τί περὶ τοῦ Ἰουδαίου φησὶν ὁ χρονογράφος ἐκεῖνος Γεώργιος ὁ Κεδρηνὸς εἰδέναι βούλομαι σε δι' εἰδησιν λέγει γὰρ ὅτι πολλὰ παρακαλούμενος ὑπὸ τῶν ἀποστόλων ὁ Ἰουδαῖος, ὥστε προσελθεῖν καὶ βαλεῖν μετάνοιαν οὐκ ἡθέλησεν ἐφ' ὃ καὶ ἀκούσας ὅτι ἀνελήφθη ὁ Χριστὸς ἐπὶ

Every time Glykas adds a new argument, citing the relevant passages, he also repeats his basic thesis (several repetitions of this kind can be traced in the text, especially in the longer letters)³³. In addition, there are also continuously interjected forms of address to the correspondents (ἄνθρωπε τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἀγαπητέ, θεοείκελε ἄνερ, ὁσιώτατε ἄνερ, ἡγαπημένε μοι πάτερ, ἀδελφέ, ὁσιώτατε ἄνερ, θεία καὶ ἵερα κεφαλή, τιμία καὶ ἵερα κεφαλὴ etc.)³⁴, as well as exhortations to them not to let their thoughts stray (μὴ θορυβοῦ, μὴ τοῖς ἔνθεν κάκεῖθεν εὑρισκομένοις καὶ ἄλλ' ἄττα διηγομένοις ἀπερισκέπτως ὑπάνοιγε σὰς ἀκοὰς etc.), but to pay full attention to Glykas' words (ὅταν νουνεχῶς, πρόσεχε, ἀκούε, πρόσχες τῇ ἀκολουθίᾳ τοῦ λόγου etc.) and be totally persuaded by his arguments (μὴ οὖν ἐπὶ πλέον ἀμφίβαλλε, μὴ ἀπίστει τοῖς λεγομένοις etc.). These set phrases and many others (δὸς ἐπὶ τούτοις ἀπόκρισιν, οὕμενον πάντως οὕμενον, ἀμήχανον πάντως ἀμήχανον etc.) are constantly repeated in different letters, reinforcing the sense of unity of the epistolographic corpus. The letters usually conclude with a short epilogue, where Glykas restates his basic thesis, encouraging his correspondent to adopt it in the name of God. At this particular point in his letters he frequently refers to the illness that prevents him from continuing his writing (Ἄρκεῖ τοσαῦτα· ἡ γὰρ τρύχονσα ἡμᾶς νόσος πλείω λέγειν οὐ συγχωρεῖ)³⁵, most probably implying the health problems due to his partial blindness.

The most prominent feature of Glykas' epistolography, however, is the continuous citation of selected excerpts from Byzantine ecclesiastical and secular sources, most of the time direct (i.e. with acknowledgement of the author and sometimes the title of the work followed by the specific passage either copied verbatim or paraphrased), on rare occasions allusive (i.e. a whole passage or single phrase taken from an obviously specific source without, however, naming either the source or its author). Recording and studying all these passages in relation to those embodied in the Bíblos Xρονική and to a minor degree the two vernacular poems is expected to complete our knowledge of Glykas' education and reading interests, that is, which texts he had studied and how he had evaluated, interpreted and, finally, used them in the context of his work – in other words his own method of letter writing. The systematic citation of certain excerpts or groups of excerpts in similar contexts in different letters indicates that Glykas based his argumentation concerning specific issues on specific texts and in the same circumstances was able to recall them verbatim (either the texts themselves or his paraphrase of them) and often in the same order³⁶. It would therefore seem logical to assume that Glykas had arranged his own corpus of theological notes, which he consulted for his letters – and why not for his chronicle as well? Apart from this, his perception of Christian literature is clear and often repeated: one should read the Holy Scriptures carefully and receptively, always interpreting them with the help of common sense³⁷. Glykas himself often tries to explain their various contradictions by enriching his argumentation with philological commentary³⁸.

As a result, however, of his constant citations of other sources, most of Glykas' letters extend to numerous pages, despite the well-known precept that letters should be brief³⁹. This is disorienting to the modern scholar, who is somewhat puzzled as to their genre: are they indeed letters or may they be considered as theological speeches/treatises in epistolary form?⁴⁰ The term “theological chapters” (obviously following the title of the modern edition) that often appears, without further clarification, in the limited secondary bibliography on Michael Glykas' epistolography is to me not particularly helpful in this regard.

It is undeniable that sixty-nine of the ninety-five texts comprising Glykas' corpus have the basic external features of a letter: the recipient's name is superscribed, the body of the letter contains repeated forms of address to him, stating his profession and often indicating Glykas' connection with him, while there are, moreover, a preface and a rather standard epilogue, written all in simple but definitely careful language. On the other hand, regardless of how strange such a systematic quoting of other texts in the context of a letter may seem to be, this method of writing is perfectly suited to Glykas' obvious aim: to explain to the recipients of his texts as comprehensibly and convincingly as possible all the issues they are interested in, most likely taking into consideration their level of education and familiarity with the relevant texts⁴¹, as well as their often limited access to most of them, for the recipients were usually simple monks⁴². If one accepts the assumption that Glykas' writings are basically letters, the next logical question is whether these are philological-didactic letters⁴³, namely texts written without necessarily a direct cause but intended later to be gathered into a single corpus, or whether they are private-philological letters that were composed for a specific reason and later incorporated into a broader corpus. Those of Glykas' letters that bear their recipients' names seem to belong to the second category, for they reply to a former letter⁴⁴ or discussion⁴⁵. It also appears that Glykas maintained correspondence, or at least had frequent personal contacts, with most of his letters' recipients, as a result of which the preserved texts were composed. In several cases Glykas states that he is actually writing a letter⁴⁶ or that there will be soon a second letter on the same topic⁴⁷. In addition to these particular points, if one reads in parallel Glykas' letters to different people on the same topic, small differences in the analysis may be detected, tailored to the particular recipient, his education, his emotional condition, and even his personal relationship with Glykas. The most characteristic example is of course his consolatory Letter 57 Tῇ περιποθήτῳ ἀνεψιᾷ τοῦ κραταιοῦ καὶ ἀγίου ἡμῶν αὐθέντου καὶ βασιλέως κυρᾶ Θεοδώρα ἀθυμούσῃ σφόδρᾳ καὶ τὴν ἑαντῆς ἀπογινωσκούσῃ σωτηρίαν δι’ ὃν ἐτόλμησε φόνον ἐπί τινι γνναικὶ ζηλοτυπίας ἔνεκεν⁴⁸, whose content is totally adapted to the particular case, as Glykas dwells on examples of Byzantine emperors involved in murders (John Tzimiskes, Theodosios, Maurikios) with the rationale that he is comforting a member of the imperial family, who may reasonably find the consolation more readily in the similar experience of former emperors. Equally interesting, however, is Letter 81, addressed to a beloved correspondent⁴⁹ (Τῷ τιμιωτάτῳ μοναχῷ κυρῷ Ἰωαννικίῳ τῷ Γραμματικῷ) on the question Eἰ χρὴ προσέχειν τοῖς λέγονσιν ὅτι οὐκ ἔξεστι καταλύειν ἐν γε Τετράδι καὶ Παρασκευῇ τὰ τῆς νηστείας, εἰ καὶ τύχῃ συμπεσεῖν αὐταῖς οἰανδήποτε δεσποτικὴν ἔορτήν). In its epilogue Glykas says that if the monks (of Ioannikios' monastery in particular?) wish to be proven φιλάδελφοι μᾶλλον εἶναι καὶ φαίνεσθαι ἡ φίλαντοι, they should allow those among them who for health reasons are unable to remain totally without food until the ninth hour⁵⁰ to have a light

41. There is a sense that Glykas cites many more passages with specific references in letters he addresses to educated correspondents. See for example Letter 52 Τῷ τιμιωτάτῳ μοναχῷ κυρῷ Λεοντίῳ τῷ ἐγκλείστῳ. Εἰ καὶ προσέχειν τοῖς λέγονσιν ὅτι μετανοίᾳ περὶ τὸ τέλος ὁ Σολομὼν ἐχρήσατο (Κεφάλαια, v. II, 69-77), for whom Glykas says πολυμαθῆ τε ἄνδρα ὄντα καὶ πεῖραν οὐ τὴν τυχοῦσαν ἐσχηκότα τῷ χρόνῳ (69,13-14).

47. See again Letter 54: Τί δὲ τὸ εἰλιτάριον καὶ ὅπως αὐτὸν κατέχει Χριστός, ἐν ἄλλῳ καιρῷ ταμιευτέον, εἴγε καὶ σθένος ἡμῖν παράσχῃ ὁ Χριστός (Κεφάλαια, v. II, 107,17-18). This second letter is not preserved. However, in his Letter 36 to Constantine Palaiologos Glykas says Ὅτι δὲ ταῦτα οὕτως ἔχει καὶ ὅτι φυσικῷ λόγῳ πρόσεστι σήμερον ἡμῖν ἡ γέννησις, ἡ αὔξησις, αὐτὸς ὁ θάνατος, ἐν ἐτέρῳ λόγῳ, εἴγε καὶ δώσει σθένος ἡμῖν ὁ Θεός, δηλωθήσεται σοι πλατύτερον (Κεφάλαια, v. I, 413,25-414,3) and he refers to the exact following Letter 37 (Τῷ αὐτῷ. Εἰ χρὴ προσέχειν τοῖς λέγονσιν ὅτι ὅρῳ ὑπόσκειται ἡ ἐνὸς ἔκάστον τῶν ἀνθρώπων ζωῆς), where indeed he deals with this topic in forty-five pages (Κεφάλαια, v. I, 416-461).

48. Κεφάλαια, v. II, 118-127.

49. Five letters of Glykas' epistolographic corpus are addressed to him (Letters 78, 81, 84, 90, 94). It is obvious that there was a correspondence between the two men; see for example the prologue of Letter 81: Ὅτι μὲν οὖν, δοιάτατε ἄνερ, ἐν νηστείᾳ διάγειν ὁ πιστὸς ὁφείλει λαδὸς ἐν τε Τετράδι καὶ Παρασκευῇ, σύμφημι τοῦτο κάγῳ καὶ οὐκ ἀντιλέγω τοῖς ἐπιφερομένοις ἥδη παρὰ τῆς σῆς ὁσιότητος... (Κεφάλαια, v. II, 322,7-10).

50. Πολλοὶ γὰρ εἰ καὶ δοκοῦσι κατὰ τὸ φαινόμενον ὑγιῶς ἔχειν, ἀλλὰ τοσοῦτον ἐμπαθῆ σώματα φέρουσιν, ὥστε καὶ τῇ τυχούσῃ προφάσει μεταβάλλεσθαί τε καὶ μετατρέπεσθαι.

meal, as was probably the case with Ioannikios himself⁵¹. Nevertheless, the fact that Glykas appears elsewhere to adopt a rather stricter approach to the Wednesday and Friday fasts shows that not all of his letters are equally impersonally didactic, but display shades of thought connected apparently with the situation of his correspondents⁵². To me, therefore, Glykas seems for the most part to have written original letters in real circumstances, replying to specific questions from specific people who apparently admired him and respected his theological education. He later gathered and revised all these letters in order to compile a handbook of popular theology, which is what his collection of letters actually is. In this context he must have formed the standardized superscription to each letter, naming it as κεφάλαιον of his book⁵³

Ούνκον δίκαιον ἔστι τοὺς τοιούτους καὶ καταλύειν ἔστιν ὅτε τὴν ἐνάτην ὑπαλλάττειν τε τὴν δίαιταν, καὶ παραμιθίας, ὡς δύναμις, τὸ νενοσηρχός ἀξιοῦν. Καὶ μὴ νόμιξε τοῦτο καταφρόνησιν εἶναι τῶν ἀποστολικῶν διατάξεων... Τί οὖν ἐπὶ τούτοις ἔστὶν εἰπεῖν; εἰ βούλονται μὴ ζημιοῦσθαι κατὰ πολὺ, καὶ εἰ προαιροῦνται φιλάδελφοι μᾶλλον εἶναι καὶ φαίνεσθαι ἡ φίλαντοι, στοιχήτωσαν τούτῳ δὴ τῷ κανόνι, φῶν τὸν ὑποτίθημι· καὶ τί ἔστιν ὁ λέγων; τοῖς οὕτως ἀνεπιτηδείως περὶ τὴν ἄχρι τῆς ἐνάτης ὥρας νηστείαν διακειμένοις, ἵνα γίνηται περὶ τὸ μέσον τῆς ὥρας διάκρουσις, ὡς διὰ κλύματος δῆθεν τόπον ἀποσάξουσα καὶ οὕτω μικρῷ τινι ψωμῷ καὶ διλιγοστῷ πόματι ἑαυτοὺς οἱ τοιοῦτοι παραμιθησάμενοι χαίροντες τὴν τελείαν περιμένοντες εὐωχίαν, ἵνα κοινῇ συνεστιαθῶσιν καὶ πείθομαι ἐν Κυρίῳ ὡς ἐὰν ἀγοργγύστως καὶ μετ' εὐχαριστίας ἀναμένωσιν, εἰ καὶ μὴ τῶν ἵσων ἐκείνοις, ἀλλ' οὖν μικροῦ δεῖν τῶν αὐτῶν ἐπιτεύξονται... (Κεφάλαια, v. II, 338,23-341,10).

51. I assume that the initial reason of Ioannikios' letter to Glykas was his disagreement with his monastery on how strictly one should fast on Wednesdays and Fridays; see Ei δὲ ταῦτα τοῦτον ἔχει τὸν τρόπον, ἐπὶ τῇ γενεθλίῳ λοιπὸν ἡμέρᾳ τοῦ λυτρωτοῦ καὶ σωτῆρος ἡμῶν Τησοῦ Χριστοῦ τί χρὴ καὶ λέγειν; ἐπειδὴ Τετράδι τῆς ἑβδομάδος ἡμέρᾳ συμπεσεῖν αὐτῇ ὡς ὁρᾶς ἔτυχε φυλάξομεν; ἄρα τὰ τῆς ἐνάτης ἐπ' αὐτῇ καὶ ἐν νηστείᾳ διατελέσομεν, εἰ καὶ δοκεῖ τοῦτο τοῖς ἡγουμένοις ἡμῶν; οὐκ ἔγωγε οἶμαι (Κεφάλαια, v. II, 332,3-8).

II, 30-36), the single letter that Glykas addresses to him.

53. See Letter 59: καθὰ δὴ καὶ ἐν ἑτέρῳ κεφαλαίῳ πρὸς τὸ τέλει τῆς βίβλου ταῦτης ὄντι τὰ περὶ τούτου μαθήσει πλατύτερον (Κεφάλαια, v. (Κεφάλαια, v. II, 348-379).

and adding the name of its recipient and a synopsis of its content⁵⁴. At this point, too, he must have incorporated the few internal references between different chapters⁵⁵, while he could have also deleted the most personal references in his letters – if there ever were such –, keeping only the frequent allusions to his illness.

This sense of Glykas' care for the composition of his epistolographic corpus is therefore to a point undermined by some basic issues in its organisation: for example, the fact that entire passages are repeated verbatim in different chapters, or even more that the criterion for the classification of the letters is unclear⁵⁶, since they are arranged neither by content or by recipient while it is also difficult to confirm the possibility of a chronological classification, customary in most Byzantine collections of letters⁵⁷, for only a few of Glykas' letters contain chronological indicators⁵⁸. As I intend to examine the problems of dating Glykas' epistography in a separate article, here I shall refer only to two highly interesting passages: (I) the epilogue of Letter 16 (Τῷ αὐτῷ – i.e. τῷ τιμιωτάτῳ μοναχῷ κυρῷ Ἡσαΐᾳ. Περὶ τοῦ πᾶς δεῖ πρὸς Ἰουδαίους ἀπαντᾶν, ἥνικα καὶ μᾶλλον ἔκεινοι τὸ κατὰ Χριστὸν ἐπιχειροῦσι διαστρέφειν μυστήριον) and (II) the prologue of Letter 43 (Τῷ τιμιωτάτῳ μοναχῷ κυρῷ Ὄνουφρῷ. Περὶ τῆς τετραμόρφου ὀπτασίας ἥν ὁ προφήτης εἶδεν Ἱεζεκιήλ, καὶ ὅπως αὐτὴν εἰς τοὺς τέσσαρας Εὐάγγελιστὰς ἐξελάβοντο).

Passage I

Καὶ ταῦτα μὲν εἰς τοσοῦτον, ὡς θειότατε ἄνερ, ὅτι μηδὲ πλείω γράφειν ἰσχύομεν, πολλοῖς, ὡς οἶδε Κύριος, ἀθυμίας βελέμνοις κατακεντούμενοι.

Passage II

Ἐδει μὲν ἡμᾶς, ἀδελφὲ Ὄνούφριε, οἵς καὶ μᾶλλον γωνία καὶ σκότος τὸ ἐπιτίμιον, ἐγγωνιάζειν ἀεὶ καθ' ἑαυτοὺς καὶ συστέλλεσθαι καὶ κατὰ τοὺς ἐν Σερίφῳ βατράχους παντελεῖ ἀφωνία κατέχεσθαι. Εἰ γὰρ ἐκεῖνοι τῆς κατὰ φύσιν στωματίας παραδόξως ἐπιλαθάνονται καὶ ἀφωνοὶ γίνονται τέλεον, ἀτε τῆς τῶν ἐκεῖσε ύδάτων μὴ ἀνεχόμενοι ψύξεως, πολλῷ μᾶλλον ἡμεῖς ἐπὶ πλέον ἄρτι σιγήσαμεν κατεψυγμένοι τε τῷ τῆς ἀθυμίας ὅντες χειμῶνι καὶ νεκρῶν ἄμεινον ἐντεῦθεν οὐδὲν διακείμενοι⁶⁰.

Why are these passages important? Because in a letter collection totally devoid of personal references, the presence of these two passages and their clear confession of Glykas' poor psychological state is highly surprising. At the same time, we should also bear in mind that this explicit statement of ἀθυμία (the word appears in both these letters), which would have led Glykas even to contemplate death, did he not find consolation to his books, comes from the mouth of a monk, since according to the prevailing view these letters were written after his release from prison, when he had adopted the monastic habit. The same atmosphere, however, in a similar context of darkness and isolation, is described in detail in Glykas' first vernacular poem from prison⁶¹. If these two letters exude the same atmosphere of prison, which is vividly depicted in the two vernacular poems, and were therefore written during his incarceration, a new perspective on Glykas' life opens up, as they may indicate that Glykas had some theological education and renown even at that time, both of which were enhanced over the following years (more correspondents, deeper knowledge of the ecclesiastical texts, discussion of more difficult theological issues, etc.).

TSOLAKIS, lines 109-110); βλέπεις, ἀπῆρε με ἡ χολή, τὸ τὸ λαλῶ οὐκ ἔξεύρω / ἔβρασεν ἡ καρδία μου, παρέκει οὐδὲν βαστάζω· / νὰ δώσω εἰς πέτραν καὶ λυθῶ, νὰ ποίσω θέαμα μέγα, / ἀπὸ στενοχωρίας μου νὰ πνίξω τὸν ἑαυτόν μου (lines 285-288); Ὄπου δεσμὰ καὶ κάκωσις καὶ νέφος ἀθυμίας (line 326). See additionally [Ἀναγωγὴ δημοτικῶν τινων ὁρητῶν], ed. S. EUSTRATIADIS, no 16, line 350: καὶ μηδὲ ζῆν νομίσαντες κείμενον ἐν γωνίᾳ.

An equally important issue, however, as far as the structure of Glykas' epistolographic corpus is concerned, is the fact that interspersed among the sixty-nine chapters addressed to specific recipients there are also twenty-six others⁶², mostly short and of various content, with no recipient named on their superscription and only the subject stated, usually after the opening phrase *Ἐπι καὶ τοῦτο ἡπόρηται*⁶³. The forms of address in most of these letters⁶⁴ do not help us identify their recipients, presupposed merely by the common second-person verbal phrases present here as in the other chapters⁶⁵. On the other hand, many of these texts close with Glykas' customary reference to his illness⁶⁶ or a similar excuse for his short treatment of the topic⁶⁷. In short, with the exception of the absence of the recipient's name and their somewhat different titles, these texts are harmoniously incorporated into Glykas' corpus as far as their composition, content and language are concerned; and the question that naturally arises is whether they are actually letters, from the manuscript tradition of which the recipients' names were simply at some point omitted, or separate treatises that Glykas added later with a view to completing his theological handbook by covering issues that had not been raised by his correspondents but which he wished to analyse in a broader theological work. It is indeed a fact that several of these chapters deal with topics not treated elsewhere⁶⁸; there are, however, also those which repeat issues already presented, possibly better and more extensively, in another letter⁶⁹. Chapter 12, the only one in Glykas' corpus that corresponds to its title's question⁷⁰, may also be the only text for which we can assume with relevant certainty that its initial version was a rhetorical speech and not a letter, for Glykas declares from its beginning that he is recording the oral answer he gave in person to a question *τοῦ κραταιοῦ καὶ ἀγίου ἡμῶν βασιλέως*⁷¹, while the emperor's reaction is described in the end of the text⁷². The above-mentioned evidence in connection with the absence of any form of address in Chapter 12 reinforces the assumption that the rest of the chapters in this category had initially been letters. This matter, however, needs further study on the basis also of the entire manuscript tradition.

Based on the other sixty-nine letters that name their recipients, we can say that Glykas had a circle of twenty-six correspondents. The great majority are monks, whose identification is rather difficult since most of them are mentioned in the titles of the letters by their first names alone (Alypios, Barlaam, Esaias, presumably a second Esaias⁷³, Leontios, Neilos,

69. See for example Letter 59 (Κεφάλαια, v. II, 133-135) compared with Letter 84 (Κεφάλαια, v. II, 348-379) regarding the corruptibility of the Eucharist, or Letter 93 (Κεφάλαια, v. II, 436-444) compared with Letter 37 (Κεφάλαια, v. I, 416-461) regarding Divine Providence.

71. Καὶ τοῦτο τοῦ κραταιοῦ καὶ ἀγίου ἡμῶν βασιλέως ἐπαποροῦντος οὕτω καὶ λέγοντος ἐὰν ἐπὶ σωτηρίᾳ τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἡ τοῦ Θεοῦ Λόγου γέγονεν ἐνανθρώπησις, διατί μὴ πολλῷ πρότερον αὕτη ἐγένετο, ὥστε καὶ αὐτοὺς ἐκείνους ἐπιγνῶναι τὸν Κύριον, δοι δι' ἀγνοιαν ἐν ἀσεβείᾳ τὸν βίον κατέστρεψαν; τοιαύτην ἐνώπιον αὐτοῦ τὴν ἀπόκρισιν ἐποίησαμεν λέγοντες. (Κεφάλαια, v. I, 150,7-12). Glykas obviously refers to Manuel I Komnenos even though he does not name him (see also Letter 40 Ἀνταπολογητικὸν ἐκ μέρους πρὸς τὴν ἐγχειρισθεῖσαν αὐτῷ γραφὴν τοῦ κραταιοῦ καὶ ἀγίου ἡμῶν βασιλέως κυροῦ Μανουὴλ τοῦ Κομνηνοῦ....).

73. I tend to consider that there are two different Esaias, as there are obvious stylistic differences between the eight mostly lengthy letters Τῷ τιμιωτάτῳ μοναχῷ κυρῷ Ἡσαΐᾳ (Letters 10, 11, 15, 16, 19, 47, 51 and 65 indicate a close relation and frequent correspondence between the two men) and the three shorter ones Τῷ τιμιωτάτῳ μοναχῷ καὶ δομεστίκῳ κυρῷ Ἡσαΐᾳ (Letters 20, 21 and 24). Moreover, if they were the same person there would Nektarios, Nikolaos, Onoufrios, Myron Panagiotes⁷⁴, Stephen, Chariton). Even the five monks whose family names are given (Gregory Akropolites⁷⁵, John Aspiotes⁷⁶, Meletios Kritopoulos, John Sinaites, Maximos Smeniotis) and the one *γραμματικός*⁷⁷ (Ioannikios Grammatikos) are totally unknown to us from other sources. However, the great number of letters written to them, the warmth of the forms of address in the superscriptions and the body of these letters, as well as other references in the text⁷⁸, indicate that Glykas maintained close relations with all these men and was recognized as an important theologian of his time, despite his provocative position on the corruptibility of the Eucharist (if we accept his identification with Michael Sikidites)⁷⁹.

By contrast, it is considerably easier to identify the higher-ranking Byzantines who corresponded with Glykas. All of them belong to the upper class and are members of the restricted circle surrounding Manuel I Komnenos, to which Glykas was apparently close, despite having once fallen have been no need to add the recipient's name in the superscription to Letter 20 (i.e. Tῷ τιμιωτάτῳ μοναχῷ καὶ δομεστίκῳ κυρῷ Ἡσαίᾳ), as Letter 19 is addressed Tῷ τιμιωτάτῳ μοναχῷ κυρῷ Ἡσαίᾳ and therefore the phrase Tῷ αὐτῷ would have been enough.

77. The term γραμματικός indicates an educated man, a scribe or secretary. It is possible that it replaced the term ἀστηροχήτης in the Komnenian Era. It could also mean the the secretary of a monastery; see ODB, v. 2, entry Grammatikos (A. KAZHDAN).

The absence of the other known Byzantine scholars of the period and of any members of the civil bureaucracy or the ecclesiastical hierarchy is definitely curious and needs to be explained. P. Magdalino⁸⁷ gives a persuasive justification: the other scholars may have rejected him because of his plain and unpretentious prose, which did not conform to their aesthetic ideal; the highly placed laymen may have avoided him on account of his imprisonment; while the ecclesiastical hierarchy was most probably angry with him because Glykas was usurping their function in interpreting Orthodox doctrine. To a degree, this logical argument explains Glykas' social isolation. At this point, however, another perspective should be considered: if Glykas has not incorporated all his correspondence in his collection, but only those letters with a specific theological content, our list of his addressees is incomplete and our conjectures become uncertain.

It is a fact that only four of Glykas' ninety-five letters have to date apparently been studied in terms of their special content: Letter 40, Glykas' famous refutation of Manuel I Komnenos' defence of astrology, Letters 59 and 84 on Glykas' position on the corruptibility of the Eucharist, and Letter 57 to Manuel's niece Theodora, whom Glykas tries to console for the murder she committed out of jealousy. Among other things this reality also causes misconceptions concerning Glykas' life, and in the following paragraphs I shall focus briefly on the most characteristic example, the famous Letter 40.

According to the prevailing scholarly view, Michael Glykas should be identified with the monk Michael Sikidites, who was responsible for the theological controversy in the late 12th century on the corruptibility of the Eucharist, for he argued that the Body and Blood of Christ offered during the sacrament of the Holy Eucharist do not contain Christ's soul and mind and are, therefore, corruptible, just like the body and blood of Jesus before the Resurrection. Though this identification fills in certain gaps in Glykas' biography, mainly for the period after his imprisonment, and is based on strong arguments (among them the above-mentioned Letters 59 and 84, which express precisely the theological position that led to Sikidites' condemnation by the Council of Constantinople in the year 1199/1200), it nonetheless raises certain other questions that need further discussion in the light of the entire corpus of Glykas' letters.

“The great problem”, according to P. Magdalino⁸⁸, one of those scholars who maintain a rather cautious attitude towards Glykas' identification with Sikidites, without however rejecting it, “is how to reconcile the uncompromisingly Patristic theologian and critic of astrology” –namely

88. MAGDALINO, Manuel Komnenos, 380.

Glykas- “with the sorcerer who put a spell on an unfortunate boatman and conjured up demons in a bath-house to torment his fellow bathers”, namely Sikidites. This is how Sikidites is portrayed in Nicetas Choniates’ history, perhaps echoing distorted and fabricated evidence that was used in his trial⁸⁹. “We could think”, Magdalino proposes, “that after his trial Sikidites became a reformed character, rejecting his old interests with the zeal of a convert” and therefore later composed Letter 40.

From my point of view the key phrase is “uncompromising critic of astrology”, which is based precisely on the well-known Letter 40, the third in a series of letters. More specifically, a monk from the Pantokrator Monastery accused Manuel of impiety because of his love of astrology (first letter, lost today). Manuel answers him with a second letter⁹⁰ and the third (Letter 40) is Glykas’ answer to the emperor: Ἀνταπολογητικὸν ἐκ μέρους πρὸς τὴν ἐγχειρισθεῖσαν αὐτῷ γραφὴν τοῦ κραταιοῦ καὶ ἀγίου ἡμῶν βασιλέως κυροῦ Μανουὴλ τοῦ Κομνηνοῦ, τὴν ἀπολυθεῖσαν πρὸς τινα μοναχὸν ἐπιμεμψάμενον οὐ μικρῶς αὐτῷ διά γε τὸ τῆς ἀστρολογίας μάθημα καὶ φιλονεικούσαν τὸ τοιοῦτον συστήσασθαι μάθημα φυσικαῖς καὶ γραφικαῖς ἀποδεῖξεσ⁹¹. A number of different issues are associated with this letter of Glykas, the most significant of all being its dating. The superscription implies that Manuel is still alive, and nothing more, while the absolute lack of chronological evidence in the body of the letter leaves modern scholars a large margin of interpretation. Consequently, those who see in Letter 40 the reason for Glykas’ imprisonment⁹² date it before the year 1159, when Glykas was still a layman and most probably imperial secretary. Eustatiadis, on the other hand, places this letter at the end of Manuel I’s reign (1143-1180), shortly before his death (24.9.1080), on the grounds that that was when the emperor finally renounced astrology⁹³. To the logical question that arises in this case, namely how Glykas dares to cross swords with the emperor again after having spent many years in prison and been released only with great difficulty, O. Kresten formulates a reasonable assumption: with Letter 40 Glykas finds the opportunity to revenge himself on the emperor for all the harm he had done him, while at the same time restoring his reputation, damaged after his imprisonment, with a written text⁹⁴. In the same framework D. George underlines Glykas' methodical effort to demolish the emperor's argumentation, which sought to redeem his reputation in the eyes of posterity⁹⁵. Nevertheless, after a careful reading of this letter one realizes that in fact Glykas is criticizing, in a highly ironic way, the misreading of sources on which Manuel bases his argumentation and not his occupation with astrology per se. I cite a characteristic excerpt: Αὐτίκα γὰρ ἀποδία σύνειμι περὶ τοῦ Ἐβραίου ἐκείνου, ὃν ὁ μέγας Βασίλειος, ἡνίκα πρὸς Κύριον ἐξεδήμει, τῆς ἱερᾶς κολυμβήθρας ἡξίωσεν· ἡ γὰρ ἐμὴ βίβλος ἰατρὸν τε διαγορεύει τὸν Ἰουδαῖον καὶ ὅτι τῷ σφυγμῷ τοῦ ἀγίου διὰ χειρὸς ἐκεῖνος προσσχών, τὸν τοῦ μεγάλου προέγγνωκε θάνατον. Τὸ δὲ ἐγχειρισθέν μοι γράμμα μαθηματικὸν αὐτὸν ἀποκαλεῖ καὶ ὅτι ταῖς τῶν ἀστρων παρασημειώσεσι τὴν τοῦ ἀγίου προέγνω μετάστασιν. Καὶ οὐ τοῦτο μόνον, ἀλλὰ δὴ καὶ τὸν μέγαν αὐτὸν παρεισάγει συναινοῦντα τῇ τοῦ Ἐβραίου μαθηματικῇ ἐπιστήμῃ καὶ ἀληθῆ ταύτην ἀποκαλοῦντα, πλείονά τε τούτων ἄλλα καὶ ποιοῦντα καὶ λέγοντα, ὃν ἡ ἐμὴ βίβλος οὐδαμοῦ μεμνημένη εὑρίσκεται. Ἡ γοῦν ἐσφαλμένως ἔχει τὰ κατ' αὐτὴν καὶ πλέον οὐδέν, ἡ τὴν διαφωνίαν ταύτην θεραπευθῆναι παρακαλῶ⁹⁶. And the rest of the letter goes on in a similar way, to my mind indicating more a cautious reader and a well-educated, confident scholar than a theologian and sworn enemy of astrology. In this context I tend to accept an earlier date for Letter 40.

At the same time, however, in a second letter⁹⁷, Glykas appears to be more flexible towards astrology, even using an argument similar to the one

Manuel used in his own letter⁹⁸, namely, that medicine and astrology are alike instruments given by God to mankind for its survival after the Fall⁹⁹ and people should use them with measure¹⁰⁰, while if astrology is condemned by the Church Fathers it is because of people mostly make improper use of it¹⁰¹. In other words, in Letter 39 Glykas recognizes the value of astrology as a helpful tool for humankind, on condition that they use it wisely.¹⁰² Thus the above mentioned reservation of P. Magdalino against identifying Glykas with Sikidites may to a degree be answered, for a careful reading of Letter 40 in connection with Letter 39 indicates that Glykas actually has not always rejected astrology as completely as we may think today¹⁰³.

To sum up, Michael Glykas' collection of ninety-five letters proves to be a core element of his work, and one that needs to be studied as a whole and in conjunction with his better-known chronicle, so that more light can be shed on the ambiguous data of this scholar's highly interesting life and thought as well as the literary production of the Byzantine 12th century.

ON THE EPISTOLOGY OF MICHAEL GLYKAS

If Michael Glykas is well-known today, it is undoubtedly thanks primarily to the Bίβλος Χρονική, his 12th-century chronicle of events from the creation of the world to the death of Alexios I Komnenos. Compared to this chronicle as well as Glykas' two vernacular poems addressed to the emperor Manuel I Komnenos and to a certain degree his collection of proverbs, Glykas' epistolographic corpus is the least studied part of his work. It consists of ninety-five texts of theological content, which aim at providing monks or higher-ranking Byzantines with persuasive answers to various theological issues that derive from the reading of the Old and New Testaments or arise in the daily lives of monks and ordinary faithful Christians. Glykas' argumentation in all these texts is based on the constant citation of mostly ecclesiastical sources and their interpretation with a strong dose of common sense and good will.

The current paper focuses on Glykas' epistolography, wishing to emphasize that it is a core element of his work, and one that needs to be studied as a whole and in conjunction with his better-known chronicle, so that more light can be shed on the ambiguous data of this scholar's highly interesting life and thought as well as the literary production of the Byzantine 12th century.
