SOME FURTHER FRAGMENTS OF THE CHRONICLE OF MANASSES

Cod. Athous 2789 Docheiariou 115, containing miscellanea, is made up of two manuscript sections, one of the fifteenth century (which forms the greater part of the codex) and another of the sixteenth<sup>1</sup>. It contains an entry (n. 32 according to the Lambros catalogue) entitled: «Οἱ ὑπὸ τοῦ Θεοφίλου ἐγγραχαθέντες εἰς τοὺς ἁγίους Θεόδωρον καὶ Θεοφάνην σίχου»<sup>2</sup>. Present here is the epigram preserved in Theophanes Continuatus (and his known user Skylitzes, whence it also passed elsewhere), which gives the letters said to have been inscribed on the foreheads of the said martyrs on the orders of the ninth-century Byzantine Iconoclast emperor Theophilus<sup>3</sup>. The epigram is however followed in the Docheiariou manuscript by twenty-four verses from the chronicle of Manasses, in particular verses 4812-4813 and 4826-4847<sup>4</sup>. The arrangement is based on the layout of verses 4826-4847, with verses 4812-4813 having been incorporated between verses 4830-4831. A few changes have been made to the text. Verse 4827 has been replaced by: ὁ ἱερὸς Θεόδωρος καὶ θεῖος Θεοφάνης. In verse 4830, μεθοδίω has replaced τῷ δικαίῳ. In 4812, τῷ ἐξορίστῳ ἀπρεπῶς has replaced θέμενος ὑπερῶριον, while in 4813, κατέκλεισεν has been rendered κατὰκλειστον. The forms: καλῶς (4832), οὐρανῶν (4838) and συνθλιβεῖς (4845), taken together, show our text to derive from the recension of Manasses present in Cod. Vaticanus graecus 1409, which is of the late thirteenth century.

The epigram and the verses from Manasses are present in the section of Cod. Docheiariou 115 dating from the fifteenth century<sup>5</sup>. Cod. Athous 492 Konstamonitou 56, from the eighteenth century, and containing most, though not all, the fifteenth-century section of Cod. Docheiariou 115, also contains the same texts.<sup>6</sup> We have therefore two further, albeit partial and reworked, representatives of Manasses to add to the 115 already known, as well as two further cases of the epigram, from whichever part of the tradition of Theophanes Continuatus it may derive.

5. Cod. Docheiariou 115, p. 220. This item is wrongly stated by the catalogue to belong to the fourteenth (actually the sixteenth)-century section of the codex.

6. Lambros, op.cit., p. 40. Cod. Konstamonitou 56, f. 89r-89v. The description of the Lambros catalogue is brief and inaccurate, in contrast to Cod. Docheiariou 115, whose description is mostly representative of its content. In this manuscript, the item bears the overall title «Ἐκ τοῦ Χρονολογίου», by which it is recorded in the said catalogue, with the added comment by the editor: «περιέχον τινὰ ἐκ τῆς ἐκκλησιαστικῆς ἱστορίας».
