Preface to the special issue

This is an issue of Open Schools Journal for Open Science created the winners of the Build your own Seismograph Contest 2020, which took place in Greece at the beginning of 2020. Primary and secondary education students had to work in groups and in collaboration with their teachers they were invited to build an improvised seismograph and to record the whole process in a presentation accompanied by photographic or other audiovisual material. All teams have worked hard, and the participations were outstanding. The winning teams are describing the manners in which they have worked and been prepared for the contest that eventually led to their success.

In this issue you will find seven articles and one poster in Greek.

Enjoy a good read!
