Two new inscriptions from Alexandreia Troas

M. RICL

TWO NEW INSCRIPTIONS FROM ALEXANDREIA TROAS

The two inscriptions presented here were seen at Dalyan Köyü near the site of Alexandreia Troas in August 1998. The first one was discovered in the vicinity of the ancient theatre and the second one near the ancient harbour. Both are presently housed in the restaurant belonging to Osman Toptamış.

The new texts constitute a welcome addition to the epigraphy of the leading Troadic city in the Hellenistic and Roman period¹.

I. White-marble block with a square dowel hole connected to the cast channels on the top surface, 0,155 m high, 0,365 m wide and 0,30 m. thick. Elegant apicis letters 0,045 m high. The inscription was damaged by pickax on the right side. Pl. 1.

Date: first/second century AD

---

Psalmus

VF vir aug(ustalis)

This block ist just a part of the original monument. The missing upper block contained at least the praenomen and the nomen of the dedication. It is not impossible that the original inscription was continued on the other adjoining block(s), below or next to the preserved one. The exact nature of the monument cannot be determined with certainty. However, on the basis of other monuments set up by seviri augustales elsewhere, we can infer that it was rather an honorary inscription or a dedication than a funerary stone.

---

1. Prior to this discovery, there were only six attestations of the rare name Psalmus (Ψάλμος): four in Athens, and one each in Dalmatia and North Italy. If we bear in mind the statistics that 8-9 out of 10 seviri augustales were freedmen, we are perhaps warranted to the same conclusion concerning the legal status of our dedicant, especially since his name points in the same direction.

2. This is the first appearance of the title sevirus augustalis inAlexandria Troas. Previously, we had one certain and one possible attestation of the title augustalis. The augustales flourished in large commercial centres, mostly in the west part of the Empire. The presence of seviri augustales in the prosperous Roman colony of Alexandria Troas, with its busy commercial port, is to be expected. However, the cities in which both seviri augustales and individual augustales are attested are rare. R. Duthoy names 25 such instances, which make up 6% of the 376 cities where one of the titles is attested. To this list we can now add Alexandria Troas and also the Roman colony at Patras.

It is generally held that there were three separate organisations on occasion coexisting with one another: seviri augustales, augustales and magistri augustales, each of them with a role in the cult of genius Augusti/nomen Augusti. Seviri augustales were as a rule relatively wealthy freedmen, members of an official collegiate body yearly (?) nominated by the municipal decurions. Upon entering their office they paid a summa honoraria to the municipal aerarium, unless a special decretum decurionum released them from this obligation. Furthermore, they were

---
2. IGII 2018, 138: ephebe Βέγγος Ψάλμος (120/1 AD); ibid. 2128, 180 and 2129, 20: ephebe Δωρικής Ψάλμος (184/5 AD); ibid. 13082: δ ἑπικληθεὶς Ψάλμος. Cf. LGPN II, s.v.
4. CIL V 160. In Pap. Masp. vol. II 67143, 4 (VI AD) we find the form Ψάλμος (cf. F. Priesigke, Namenbuch, Heidelberg 1922 [Amsterdam 1967], s.v.).
6. Cf. H. Solin, Die griechischen Personennamen in Rom, vol. III, 1982, pp. 1176-80, for the other names derived from the sphere of music, such as Molpe, Hymnus, Ode.
7. IK 53, nos 445.
expected to contribute a separate sum ob honorem seviratus. The insignia to which they were entitled (accompanied by lictores with fasces, they wore a toga praetexta and sat on a sella curulis or a tribunal) underlined their official position in the city. In time, they formed an ordo comparable to that of equites in Rome, confirming their position between the local ordo and the mere plebs.

II. Marble block with a rim above, broken on the left side and below, damaged on the right side, 1.41 m long, 0.32 m high and 0.15 m thick. Apiced letters 0.055 m high. Pl. 2.

Date: third century AD.

[ name, ethnic name] καὶ Τρωάδεὺς, βουλευτής, ἔθηκα
[τὴν σοφίαν ἐν τῇ ὑπόκατω ὑποχειμένη μέση καμάρα ἐμο[υ]
[τῷ καὶ ]

This considerably damaged block comes from a funerary complex belonging to a distinguished family of Alexandreia Troas in the Imperial period. The missing left part of the first line contained the name of the owner. Judging by the conjunction καὶ preceding the ethnic Τρωάδεὺς, the person in question was a citizen of at least one other city. Cases of multiple citizenships are not uncommon at this age, particulariy among distinguished athletes and artists. For Alexandreia Troas itself, we have two epigraphically attested instances of foreigners honoured by its citizenship. The ethnic name Τρωάδεὺς was the prevalent one in Alexandreia Troas ever since foundation of the Roman colony on its site. The attestations of the simple place name Τροφᾶς and of the corresponding ethnic name are numerous, in authors as well as in inscriptions. In the Hellenistic period, on the other hand, we consistently encounter the name "Αλεξάνδρεια, whether alone or coupled with Τροφᾶς and Αἰολίς.

---

11. It is possible that the block published here is a part of a monument erected by Psalmus ob honorem seviratus.
13. To the attestations collected in IK 53, add the case of Θεόφιλος πιστὸς νιὸς Εὐφροσύ-  ου Τροαδέος (SEG XXXVII, 1069, V-VI AD, Büyükada, Bithynia).
The anonymous owner of the funerary complex was a municipal councillor, a δικαίωτης. Two δικαίωται of Alexandria Troas were already on record\textsuperscript{14}, while the municipal δικαίωμα features in seven inscriptions from the Imperial period\textsuperscript{15} and two from the Hellenistic period\textsuperscript{16}. In view of the fact that Alexandria Troas was a Roman colony, the term δικαίωτης should be understood as the Greek variant of the Latin decurio\textsuperscript{17}.

The verb τάθημα used in the same context appears in several funerary inscriptions from Alexandria Troas\textsuperscript{18}. In most cases it refers, either explicitly or implicitly, to a sarcophagus. The new inscription furnishes us with the first attestation of the well-known funerary καμάρα in this part of the Troad\textsuperscript{19}. Previously, the only comparable term in Alexandria was τὸ μνημείον ("the tomb")\textsuperscript{20}. The term καμάρα usually designates a vaulted family funerary chamber\textsuperscript{21}. They were constructed to receive one or more sarcophagi, and the inscriptions naming them are as a rule engraved on stone slabs placed next to the chamber or built into it. In our case, there are two possibilities: 1. if we accept the restoration ἐν τῇ ὑποχώτῳ ὑποκειμένη μέση καμάρα, this means that the block with the inscription stood above the καμάρα containing the sarcophagus. The adverb ὑποχώτω may seem redundant in view of the immediately following ὑποκειμένη, unless it is to be understood as being equivalent in its meaning to ὑπάρχων\textsuperscript{22}, 2. if we restore σύν τῇ ὑποχώτῳ ὑποκειμένη μέση καμάρα, then the new block comes from the side of a sarcophagus which originally

\begin{footnotes}
\item[14] IK 53, nos. 98, 140.
\item[15] ib. nos. 42, 43, 50-52, 98, 140.
\item[16] ib. nos. 3-4.
\item[18] ib. nos. 83-85, 94, 97, 98, 101, 102, 107, 109, 111 A, 129.
\item[19] Cf. the diminutive form καμάριον in Assos (R. Merkelbach, IK 4, no. 71).
\item[20] I.K. 53, nos. 83 and 113, possibly also no. 98; cf. J. Kubinska, Les monuments funéraires dans les inscriptions grecques de l' Asie Mineure, 1968, 97. Mnemeion is usually composed of several parts, including a kamara.
\item[22] For the meaning of the verb ὑποκειμένη, cf. LSJ s.v., II. 8 b. Another ὑποκάτω καμάρα appears in an inscription from Lydian Troketta (J. Keil, A. von Premerstein, Bericht über eine Reise in Lydien und der südlichen Aiolis, Denkschr. Akad. Wien, phil.-hist. Kl. 53, 2, 1908, no. 24): Μητροφανής Ἀριώ καὶ γυναικὶ καὶ αὐτῷ τὸ μνημεῖον καὶ τὸν σοφόν. Χρήσται δὲ ὁ καλονόμος μου καὶ οἱ ἀπελεύθεροι οἱ ἐμοὶ καὶ τῆς γυναικὸς μου τῇ ὑποκάτῳ καμάρᾳ..., cf, also τὸ ὑποκαμάριον in Lykia (TAMII, no. 45).
\end{footnotes}
stood on top of the kamara. A comparable case is found in an inscription from Smyrna mentioning a kamara built under the θωρακεῖον supporting three sarcophagi. I prefer the first interpretation.

Since the new inscription mentions a μέση καμάρα, we conclude that there were at least three chambers in the same complex. Cases of more than one chamber in the same funerary complex are common.

---

23. IGRIV 1474: ἀγοράσας τὸ θωρακεῖον καὶ τὰς ἐπ’ αὐτῶ σοφοὺς τρεῖς καὶ προσκατασκευάσας τὴν κατ’ αὐτῶν καμάραν.
24. Kubinska, op. cit., 98.
ΠΕΡΙΛΗΨΗ

ΔΥΟ ΝΕΕΣ ΕΠΙΓΡΑΦΕΣ ΑΠΟ ΤΗΝ ΑΛΕΞΑΝΔΡΕΙΑ ΤΡΩΑΔΑ

Στό άρθρο δημοσιεύονται δύο ανέχοντες επιγραφές από τη ρωμαϊκή ἀποικία που ύπηρε στήν Ἀλεξάνδρεια Τρώαδα. Ὡς πρώτη -τό πιθανότερο αναθηματική και ὁχι ἐπιτύμβια- εἶναι γραμμένη στὰ λατινικά, χρονολογείται στὸν 1ο/2ο αἰ. μ.Χ. καὶ προέρχεται ἀπὸ κάποιον Ψάλμο που ἀναφέρεται ως μέλος τοῦ ἀποτελομένου ἀπὸ εὐκατάστατος ἀπελευθέρωσες collegium τῶν augustales. Στό ὑπόμνημα τῆς επιγραφῆς δίνονται πληροφορίες γιὰ τὴν διάδοσι, συγκρότηση καὶ τὸν λειτουργικὸ ρόλο τῶν augustales, ἀναφέρονται οἱ παράλληλες μαρτυρίες γιὰ τὸ ὅνομα τοῦ ἀναβόητη καὶ ἐπισημαίνεται τὸ γεγονός ὅτι ἐκδιδόμενη επιγραφὴ ἐποτελεῖ τὴν πρώτη μαρτυρία γιὰ τὴν ὑπαρχὴ augustales στὴν ρωμαϊκὴ ἀποικία τῆς Ἀλεξάνδρειας Τρώαδος.

Ὡς δεύτερη επιγραφὴ προέρχεται ἀπὸ ταφικὸ κτίσμα ("καμάρα") ἐπιφανοῦς οἰκογενείας καὶ χρονολογεῖται στὸν 3ο αἰ. μ.Χ. Τὸ ὅνομα τοῦ ἀναφερομένου στὴν επιγραφὴ προσώπου δὲν ἕχει σωθῆναι ἢ ἐνδείξει "και Τρώαδεὺς" δηλώνει ὅτι ύπηρες καὶ πολίτης ἄλλης πόλεως, ὅ δε προσδιορισμὸς "βουλευτὴς" ἐρμηνεύεται ὡς ἀπόδοσι τοῦ λατινικοῦ decurio. Μὲ βάση τὴν προτεινόμενη συμπλήρωση τοῦ δεύτερου στίχου τῆς ἐπιγραφῆς σχολιάζεται ἐπίσης ἡ δομὴ τοῦ κτίσματος.