New Inscriptions from late antique Aphrodisias

In the years 1995-2007 a series of inscriptions dating from Late Antiquity (late 3rd-7th cent.), mostly graffiti, were either found during the excavation or were seen by the author and other members of the excavation team in various buildings of the city. The most important of these inscriptions are presented in this article.¹ I have not included graffiti, small fragments, individual letters, and inscriptions on pottery. The dates suggested for these texts are in most cases approximate. The dating criteria are the letter forms,² the onomastics, and the use of certain expressions and religious symbols (especially of crosses). All dates are A.D. unless otherwise stated. I should like to express my warm thanks to the Directors of the Aphrodisias Excavation R.R.R. Smith (Oxford) and C. Ratté (New York, now Ann Arbor) for entrusting me with the study of this material and for supporting my research at Aphrodisias in the years 1995-1997 and 1999-2007; Joyce Reynolds (Cambridge) and Charlotte Roueché (London) for the permission to consult and refer to unpublished material;³ the Alexander S. Onassis Foundation for financing my research in 1997; the Dorot Foundation for a grant which enabled me to study the

The text is written within double guidelines; cf. ALA 157; SEG XXXVI 970 A. The abbreviation sign ⁵ is used after the letters K (l. 2), Λ (l. 3), Λ and B (l. 4), and P, Δ and P (l. 5).

With good fortune. This work too was renewed from the foundations up under Fl(avius) [---]us, spectabilis, tribunus, [father?] of the most splendid metropolis of the Aphrodisieis.

This text belongs to a large group of inscriptions recording building activities in late antique Aphrodisias, from the first half of the fourth to the sixth century.⁴ The restored building cannot be identified. The formulations used in this text have close parallels in contemporary inscriptions.⁵

The person responsible for the work had a high rank in the imperial administration, as the title περιβλεπτος implies. In Aphrodisias this title is attested for the governor Fl. Palmatus (ALA 62: περίβλεπτος ὑπατικός) in the late fifth or early sixth century.⁶ The same title is used for other tribuni: Taurus in Kos (Iscr. Cos EV 63, fourth/fifth century), Romulus in Diokletianoupolis (EAM 203 + SEG XXXVII 475, fifth/sixth century), Faustinus in Prusa ad Olympum (I. Prusa 1095), Fl. Martyrius in Arabia (SEG XXXV 1582, c. 550), and an anonymous man in Tarsos (SEG XXXVII 1348). He probably was a trinunus et notarius like Taurus, Romulus, and Faustinus.⁷

The genitive [τ]ῆς λα[μ]πρ(οτάτης) Ἀφροδ(ισιέων) μητρ(οπόλεως) does not refer to this office, since the tribuni et notarii did not have a local assignment. It is part of an honorary title of this person, probably πατρός τῆς λαμπροτάτης Ἀφροδισιέων μητροπόλεως. This title is attested for Fl. Athenaios in the late fifth or early sixth century (ALA 62). The title πατήρ, without the addition of τῆς λαμπροτάτης Ἀφροδισιέων μητροπόλεως, was awarded to several other important men in Aphrodisias, the scholastici Fl. Ampelius (ALA 22 and 43), Fl. Photius (ALA 69 and 238), and Rhodopaios (ALA 85), and the councillor Theopompos (ALA 89). Another possible restoration is κτίστης, a title awarded to several benefactors.⁸ However, when it is followed by the name of the city it is used for governors.⁹ The title ἀνανεωτής τῆς λαμπρᾶς μητροπόλεως, attested for Helladios (ALA 17) in the fourth century seems to long, but we cannot exclude an abbreviation.¹⁰ The title of Aphrodisias as λαμπρά or λαμπροτάτη μητρόπολις is often attested.¹¹

The name Flavius (post-Constantine), the use of the cross, and the letter forms suggest a date after c. 350. The use of the title περίβλεπτος for a tribunus makes a date in the fifth century most likely.

c. fifth century AD or later.

Christogram Κύριε βοήθ[ι] or βοήθ[ησον].

This common Christian prayer formula is often attested in Aphrodisias.¹⁷

6. Fragment

I 99.006. Fragment of a marble block, broken on all sides, inscribed with letters engraved carelessly. (Fig. 10). Height 16 cm, width 17 cm, depth 13 cm; letter height 0.7-1.5 cm. Found during the removal of architectural fragments placed in rear chamber 6 of the Bouleuterion, originally from the area of the Temple-Church.

11. Fragment with a monogram

Inv. No. 01.022 (I 01.006). Fragment of a marble plaque broken on all sides, found in the room north of the apse of the Temple-Church, in a stone storage pile. Height 16 cm, width 8.5 cm, depth 4.3 cm, letter height 7 cm.

Fourth century AD or later.

A monogram consisting of ΠΕΡ and possibly Τ. Perhaps Πέτρ(ος).

Summary

This article presents 11 new inscriptions found during the recent excavations at Aphrodisias in Asia Minor (1995-2007). A building inscription (1, c. 5th cent. AD) commemorates the restauration of an unknown building by the περίβλεπτος τριβοῦνος Flavius [---]. This is the first attestation of this office of the Imperial administration in Aphrodisias. The anonymous benefactor may have had the honorary title πατήρ τῆς λαμπροτάτης Ἀφροδισιέων μητροπόλεως. The other inscriptions include a fragmentary Christian dedication (2, c. 4th cent. AD), three Christian prayers (3-5, c. 5th cent. AD), one of which preserves the name Προκόπιος (3), a fragment mentioning an οἰκονόμος or οἰκονόμοι (6, 3rd cent. AD), parts of honorary inscriptions with the invocation Ἀγαθῇ Τύχῃ (7-8, 4th and 5th cent. AD), the epitaphs of Ἰουλιανός (9, 4th cent. AD) and Θεοδώρητος (10, 4th cent. AD), and a monogram (Πέτρος?) on a plaque (11, 4th cent AD).
